Section 14

COMPLAINTS

GENERAL

14.1 In the course of carrying out its function, the Mission will receive complaints by one side or the other alleging activities contrary to the agreement or declaration which the Mission is charged with observing. Detailed action to be taken on the receipt of various types of complaints must be determined in relation to the terms of reference of the mission. Generally, complaints should be made in writing by the local commander and receipt acknowledged by the liason officer or sector commander. When an investigation is indicated, all essential assistance should be requested from the complaining side including guides, map references, witnesses, interpreters and physical evidence (including crater analysis).

ACTION ON RECEIPT OF COMPLAINT

14.2 On receipt of a complaint, the liason officer or sector commander receiving the complaint will allot a complaint serial number and complete the form at Annex A which should then be forwarded to the Force HQ together with a copy of the original complaint. Duty Officers will then inform the appropriate sector HQ/ MILOB Sector HQ to carry out the necessary investigation.

14.3 Liason Officers may also report by radio, relaying the same information that is contained in Annex A. In this situation the Force HQ Duty Officer will record the information on the form at Annex A.

COMPLAINTS REGISTER

14.4 To ensure that action is taken on all complaints received, the Force HQ will maintain a COMPLAINTS REGISTER with the headings shown on the sample form at Appendix 1 to Annex C.

RESPONSIBILITY

14.5 The Force HQ will be responsible for completing all action on the complaints. It should be noted however that when sectors are established this responsibility will be d[illegible]

4/11

INTERIM SOP

Sector HQ's.

INVESTIGATIONS

14.6 When incidents are observed by military observers or other members of UNAMIR, Force HQ will decide whether or not an investigation is warranted. When complaints are received and an investigation is warranted, Force HQ must comply unless the complaing side fails to provide sufficient information or to give assistance as may be required to complete the investigation.

CONDUCT OF INVESTIGATIONS

14.7 Having decided to conduct an investigation the Officer-in-Charge (OIC) should proceed as follows:

14.7.1 Check the complaint to ensure all the necessary information has been given, e.g. locations, details of alleged action, dates and times;

14.7.2 Arrange for any assistance required from the formation making the complaint, e.g. guides, interpreters and witnesses;

14.7.2 Notify any other section or branch concerned with the investigation and request any necessary assistance; and

14.7.3 Assign military observers to conduct an investigation patrol. Particular attention in briefing the patrol should be given to the following:

a. Military observers must know and understand the aim of the investigation and know how to conduct the investigation. They must also be prepared to conduct crater analysis if required;

b. Military observers must know of the assistance to be provided by all parties and other sections or branchs in conducting the investigation;

c. They must be aware of anny special administrative arrangements required for the investigation;

d. Watch over the progress of the investigation and offer any assistance or advice which may be necessary;

e. Supervise the completion of the investion report;

f. Forward the completed report, including comments to the Force HQ. When the sectors are established the Sectors will be delegated this responsiblity; and

g. Arusha HQ's will then complete all follow up action, including letters of protest as required.

14.8 Having been detailed to conduct an investigation patrol, military observers should proceed to the area of the incident, collect evidence, and prepare their report. For the purpose of an investigation, evidence can be considered as being of three types as follows:

14.8.1 Material Evidence. This type of evidence forms the basis of the investigation. When it is possible to obtain material evidence, conclusive findings can often be made.

14.8.2 Verbal Evidence. Verbal evidence can only be considered reliable when it is given by a completely impartial witness, e.g. military observer, or when it is corroborated by witnesses from the opposite side. In all other cases, verbal evidence by itself cannot be considered conclusive.

14.8.3 Circumstancial Evidence. This type of evidence can only be considered conclusive when it is corroborated by reliable verbal or material evidence. It should however be included in the investigation report.

PREPARATION OF INVESTIGATION REPORTS

14.9 Investigation reports must be clear, concise, and accurate. They should include:

14.9.1 The aim of the investigation, specifically what must be proved or disapproved should be stated clearly;

14.9.2 The time and date of the investigation of the incident must be included;

14.9.3 Locations visited in the area of the incident should be listed;

14.9.4 Evidence should be arranged in chronological order where possible;

14.9.5 Witnesses' statement should be attached where applicable;

14.9.6 Opinions and assumptions must not be included in the body of the investigation report;

14.9.7 Sketches should be used to clarity difficult or confused situations. The scale of the sketch and the direction of North must always be indicated on the sketch;

14.9.8 Findings must be based on facts established during the investigation. Avoid opinions based on evidence not included in the investigation report. If a fact is pertinent, it must be stated in the evidence; and 14.9.9 Reports should be prepared with the events in proper(normally chronological) sequence and end with a summary of important facts and findings.

NOTE: Sample report form at Annex B.

URGENT

I note your requirement and will respond with an offer. I would like to query the qty of suction hose. 35m of suction hose under normal conditions would be too long a achieve a vacuum and good pumping rate. The pump would definately have to be hand primed (filled with water past the pump) and if the head between the source and the pump is more than 1 - 1.5 m it will reduce the output.

The pump should be placed as near to the water source as possible and as low to the water level as possible.

Does this information change your requirement!?

First and foremost we would like you to appreciate the location of our bureau, which is centrally located, convenient, and easy to reach if and when you are in Kampala,i.e. we are in the Sheraton Hotel arcade, where your staff usually stay when in Kampala.

1. By virtue of the solid and good relationship we have with all major Airlines operating out of Uganda, and furthermore due to the complimentary presence of the two sister companies,i.e. Speedbird Forex Bureau G.S.A for Gulf Air, and Speedbird Aviation Services (Domestic charter within East Africa), we are sure we can provide a complete and comprehensive reservation and ticketing service including confirmation of all requested airline reservation and issuance of tickets in accordance with your procedures.

2. In view of the above (No. 1), we are capable of providing the lowest applicable fares/estimates for authorised routings, especially those related to our sister companies i.e. Speedbird Forex Bureau (G.S.A for Gulf Air) and Speedbird Aviation Services.

Referte: jouw vorige fax, o.a.

1. Jouw verslag van het bezoek van Minister Jan Pronk vond ik maar vrij summier. Ik dacht een "minute-to-minute" verslag te krijgen over zijn uitspattingen. Maar nee hoor, een kort verhaal in nauwelijks een deel en verzin de rest er maar bij. Afin, wij behelpen ons maar met de kranteverslagen over zijn wandelingen in Kigali.
2. De foto's van Rob zijn donderdag 26 mei aangekomen. Ik heb ze laten zien aan Bgen Pollé en heb met de Belgische Milat, Kol Luijten, een afspraak gemaakt voor vrijdagochtend. Dan komt hij ze afhalen bij mij. Waarschijnlijk zal hij met Rob nog wel een afspraak maken voor een "nader gesprek", maar dat merkt hij van zelf wel.
3. Afgelopen vrijdag heb ik op het DCBC tijdens het krijgsmachtdelen-overleg een nadere uitleg gegeven over UNOMUR en datgene dat ik weet over Rwanda met Kigali. Zoals je weet heeft de NL Regering "NO GO" gezegd tegen deelname aan Rwanda. De redenen zijn de volgende:
   a. Het spreken van de NL taal gelijkt teveel op het Vlaams van de Belgen, waardoor een bizarre vergissing het gevolg zou kunnen zijn. O.a. een reden waarom de FC Rob heeft weggezonden.
   b. Ook NL heeft een koloniaal verleden net als België. En die vergelijking zou ook wel eens op de verkeerde manier worden uitgelegd.
4. Daarom bleven er maar weinig opties over:
   a. Ondersteuning van de kampen in Tanzania met bijvoorbeeld een Tcie. Door onze langdurige deelname te Bosnië met een TBat is dat echter onmogelijk. Wij lopen wat deze categorie betreft eigenlijk al op onze tenen, maar het gaat nog steeds net goed. Maar een extra eenheid voor Tanzania erbij is teveel van het goede.
   b. Extra waarnemers voor Uganda voor inzet aan de grens met Rwanda. Dit is voor ons geen enkel probleem. Voorshands is de BLS reeds accoord gegaan met zo'n 10 extra waarnemers ALS DE VN DAAROM VRAAGT TENMIN-

STE. Ik heb daarbij in gedachten de plotseling na een paar maanden teruggekeerde club uit Angola. Maar er wordt nog niets gevraagd, dus wachten we maar af.

5. George en SC-O vertrekken dit weekend voor hun Afrika-Tour van zo'n 14 dagen. Je ziet ze van zelf wel verschijnen. Van Pollé begreep ik al dat hij belangstellend uitziet naar het grensgebied en de stromen vluchtelingen. Van dat laatste heb ik gezegd dat daarvan m.i. nauwelijks sprake is, omdat de RPF de grens controleert. Maar ongetwijfeld weet jij verborgen overgangen en mogelijk zelfs vluchtelingenkampen. Denk vooral aan de genie-aspekten van het terrein en niet te vergeten de infrastruktuur.

6. Johan is deze week op pad met de DGP, de DPKL, de IGDKL en de Voorzitters der Belangenverenigingen naar m.n. Bosnië. Daar wordt op personeels- en personeelszorggebied weer het nodige afgesproken. Ongetwijfeld een goede zaak. Dat kun jij met George ook bespreken en ik hoor wel van hem. Ik heb nooit vernomen of de TV het wel doet, of de antenne goed is gericht, of je RTL 4 en 5 wel kunt ontvangen, etc. Grote discussies zijn hier gaande tussen G1 en G4 over het wel dan niet zenden van gevechtsrantsoenen naar UNMO's, die genoeg toelage krijgen om zelf alles te kopen, etc. De CS zal t.z.t. wel eens beslissen.

7. Rotatie 7 en 8 van Angola zijnintussen van nummer gewisseld, want ze moeten nog steeds blijven wachten. UNAVEM III is immers nog steeds niet van toepassing. Bedroevend dat zo'n groep van 21 man al vanaf medio maart 1994 in de "wachtlink" zit. En voor eind juni zie ik het nog niet gebeuren. Dus gaat eerst de aflossing van 4 man er uit. Wanneer voor jou dus Angola in de kijker komt blijft voorshands een open vraag.

8. De Thuisfrontdag te Soesterberg voor de Afrika-missies is uitstekend verlopen. Ik heb met Rob's vrouw enige tijd kunnen spreken en ze zag er buitengewoon ontspannen uit, tot aan het bijna jolige toe. Jammer dat Mevrouw Kolonel Noordsij niet aanwezig was. Dus moest ik de microfoon maar pakken en zeggen "Schat, hoe gaat het met je ?" Veel gegier in de zaal, maar jij kon het niet verstaan, helaas. Toch een goede zaak dat Marianne en Rob later toch nog enigermate privé konden spreken.

9. Nou dat was het zo'n beetje op de gegevens van onze Milad te New York na. We hebben nog steeds geen nieuw kabinet. De paarse onderhandelingen zijn nog steeds gaande. De CD-partij van Jan Maat is nagenoeg uit elkaar aan het klappen: goede zaak. Genm Johan Kosters is door NL voorgedragen voor FC-UNDOF (Golan-hoogvlakte). Kolonel Andre Paulusma en Lkol Menno Broekema gaan medio juni naar de 1e operationele CVSE-crisisbeheersingsoperatie: te Nagorno-Karabach (waarnemers-missie). En we gaan langzaam naar de zomer toe, alhoewel het weer in NL de laatste tijd shit is. Maatje Leen, de Hollandse "maatjes"-haring is er weer en Koos weet onze staf weer enorm te verwennen. Daarom sluit ik af met de groeten van alle bekenden, het ga jullie goed en tot hoors. Hier de door jou gevraagde gegevens van Raymond (van Veen) en Ed (Koestal).

Press Release SG/SM/5297
25 May 1994

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I will begin by mentioning first of all that the Security Council will take action this afternoon to lift the embargo on South Africa. In other words, this is the first step towards the return of South Africa to the United Nations. It is one of our important success stories, because we have contributed to the eradication of apartheid over the last 25 years. I welcome South Africa in the United Nations, and I believe that it will play a very important role not only inside Africa but at the world level.

Secondly, I want to mention that I have decided to appoint Ambassador [Terje Roed] Larsen of Norway as my Special Coordinator in the occupied territories. This nomination is effective as of 1 June. As you may be aware, Ambassador Larsen had played an important role in facilitating the negotiations between the Israeli Government and the Palestinians in Oslo, which led to the agreements last September in Washington. I have obtained the agreement of the Prime Minister of Norway, of Shimon Peres and of Yasser Arafat; all three have agreed on his nomination, and I have informed the General Assembly of this nomination.

Thirdly, despite the fighting in the city of Kigali, today Mr. Riza [Iqbal Riza, Assistant Secretary-General for Peace-keeping Operations] and General Baril [General Joseph Maurice Baril, military adviser] managed to reach the city of Gitarama. As you know, that city is about 40 kilometres southwest of Kigali. There, they were able to meet the representatives of the Government and are returning to Kigali now, where they will most likely spend the night and will meet once again with the representatives of the RPF [Rwandese Patriotic Front].

May I mention now that I delivered this morning to the President of the General Assembly a report on the "Agenda for Development", and an executive summary of this Agenda for Development will be available to you this afternoon.

As you remember, my report was prepared in response to a formal request of the General Assembly expressed in resolution 47/161. This is the first step. It is a document of reflection, and on the basis of this document I hope that the members of the General Assembly will present a series of recommendations and suggestions.

As you know, the purpose of this "Agenda" is to correct a distorted perception of the United Nations. The perception is that the United Nations is dealing only with peace-keeping operations, and I want to correct this distortion. We are also involved in development. Development is a prerequisite for peace. In the "Agenda" I make an analysis of the different dimensions of development. The first is peace, which is the foundation of development; without peace, we cannot have development. The second is economic development, the third, environment -- this is what was decided in Rio about sustainable development; the fourth is the social dimension of development; and the fifth is the political dimension, which is democracy.

I also mention that we find that there are many actors dealing with development. Those actors are the Member States, the United Nations and the non-governmental organizations. The real problem will be how to set up better coordination, first, between the different elements of development, and secondly, between the different actors dealing with development. Let us say that peace, economy, environment, social development and democracy are the basic foundations of development. The Member States and the various programmes and funds of the United Nations, to give figures, are spending $3.6 billion every year on development. If you compare that with the $2 billion spent on peace-keeping, you can see that development is still the major activity of the United Nations.

I will also mention private and individual investment, which is a very important factor, as are the non-governmental organizations. As I mentioned, the problem is how we will be able to have better coordination between the various actors and, at the same time, what the priority ought to be. Must we begin with democracy, environment, social development or purely economic development? The whole approach is that unless we have a comprehensive approach to development, we will not be able to solve the real problem of tomorrow and the real problem of the United Nations.

Those are the few things I wished to tell you. I am now at your disposal to answer any question related to the various activities of the United Nations.

QUESTION: On behalf of the United Nations Correspondents' Association, I welcome you here and thank you very much for taking time out to speak to us.

You have been sending special envoys around the world collecting funds for peace-keeping operations. We know that these activities cannot be stopped -- the chances are that the demands for peace-keeping will increase, as will the demand for funds. My question is: What is the point of putting out an "Agenda for Development" now, when you know these resources are limited, and how do you convince rich countries to work through the United Nations system when you know they prefer the bilateral approach?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: First, some of those envoys I have sent have been successful. Certain Member countries have accepted, on a voluntary basis, to move from category "C" in the participation of the budget of the peace-keeping forces to category "B". If we had 20 or 30 countries doing this, it would certainly help us with the budget of the peace-keeping operations.

Secondly, what we are saying in our "Agenda for Development" is that because we receive less assistance it is important to have better coordination to avoid duplication. It is important to have better coordination and synchronization and to agree on the priorities which must be given. The priorities have to be decided by the Member States.

So I agree with you, and if you read this paper you will see that one of the main problems is that there is a fatigue of the donor countries. One of the ways to overcome this fatigue is certainly a mobilization of public opinion, and this is one of the purposes of this "Agenda": mobilization on the importance of development and on showing the interconnection between development and peace. It would be useless to spend $1 billion or $2.6 billion on peace if we did not have development, if we were not able to offer a follow-up to the countries which were in a state of war, civil, ethnic or international war. So this is one approach: the mobilization of international public opinion.

But the second approach to overcome the fatigue is to have better coordination within the United Nations system, where we have different funds and different programmes, between the United Nations and the different specialized agencies -- the World Bank, the IMF [International Monetary Fund], the ILO [International Labour Organisation], UNESCO [United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization] -- and then between the United Nations and the non-governmental organizations. There could be something new between the United Nations and the private sector, the business sector. We are trying to do this and are hoping that, through this coordination, we will be able to contain the deterioration going on in the field of international assistance or in the field of economy and development.

QUESTION: Given the growing number of failed States in Africa, have you given thought to reviving a Dag Hammarskjöld proposal, called OPEX, by which the United Nations would send shadow governments of trained United Nations personnel who would run the Governments until they could train people to take over?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: We are ready to offer political assistance. In fact, what we have done in El Salvador, Cambodia and Somalia is assistance, political and technical assistance, in the field of reconstruction. By reconstruction we mean not only physical or economic reconstruction, but political reconstruction, too. What we are now doing is to assist the multi-party system in Mozambique. We have created a special fund for RENAMO. So we are trying to do our best. But we cannot do this unless there is agreement of the Member States. Otherwise, we will be accused of neocolonialism.

QUESTION: We have heard your comments in Europe and elsewhere about Rwanda. I would like to ask you -- not as Secretary-General, not as a diplomat, not as a bureaucrat, but as a human being, as a person -- about your feelings in your heart, in your soul, not in your brain, when you see the piles of corpses strewn throughout Rwanda and coming down the rivers and the lakes. How do you respond to that on an emotional level?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I will try not to be emotional. Let us recognise that it is a failure, a failure not only of the United Nations but also of the international community. All of us are responsible for this failure, not only the great Powers but also the African Powers, the non-governmental organizations and the whole international community.

It is a genocide which has been committed. More than 200,000 people have been killed, and the international community is still discussing what ought to be done. I have tried. I was in contact with different Heads of State, and I begged them to send troops. I was in contact with different organizations and tried my best to help them find a solution to the problem. Unfortunately, let me say with great humility, I failed. It is a scandal. I am the first one to say it and I am ready to repeat it.

QUESTION: My question is also on Rwanda. You were quoted as saying on "Nightline" recently that with 5,000 troops, the situation in Rwanda could have been avoided. Now the United Nations is looking for 5,500 troops. Considering the fact that the Security Council voted to reduce the size of UNAMIR [United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda] at the onset of this conflict, would you agree that the United Nations decision earlier on to reduce the size of UNAMIR amounted to a mishandling of the situation, which in turn aggravated the situation as it is now?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: You see, my role is to respect the decisions and the resolutions of the Security Council. I can suggest different solutions, but the decisions are taken by the Security Council. That was point one.

Point two: it would be useless to say that I needed 20,000 troops and to obtain a resolution from the Security Council for the 20,000 troops if I were not able to find those 20,000 troops. Take the case of Bosnia. I asked in June last year for 10,000 additional troops. We are now at the end of May and so far I have not been able to obtain those 10,000 troops. So let us be realistic. Unless we have the support of the Member States we will not be able to obtain the troops we need on the ground.

I tried through bilateral contacts when I was in Pretoria and Johannesburg and I saw six or eight Heads of State to obtain from them their participation in peace-keeping operations. That would have created a favourable new momentum. I was the man who sent the former French Minister of Humanitarian Affairs, Mr. [Bernard] Kouchner, there, hoping that by his presence there he would create a mobilization of world public opinion in Europe about this problem. Let us be very honest, I was not successful.

QUESTION: Mr. Secretary-General, you expressed optimism last year that the fallout from the operation in Somalia would be fairly limited to a couple of months. Now, with Rwanda, we see very clearly the fallout that you are not able to find troops. I wonder how you now assess the fallout of the Somalia operation.

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I believe that we have just received a report from a British international non-governmental organization which I will distribute. I believe that on the whole the results were positive. We have fewer children dying, we have been able to have our local police in action, we have been able to maintain a peace process, the parties are meeting and holding conferences.

In terms of peace-keeping, we still have 20,000 troops there on the ground, and this is something positive. The Security Council will discuss this in the next few days. I hope it will vote to extend the mandate for an additional period and that we will be able to maintain the troops there for the next few months until we can achieve reconciliation, or at least until there is a provisional government. On the whole, I would say it is a positive operation.

The problem is that simply because the United Nations intervenes in a crisis somewhere in the world, that does not mean that you are bound to be successful. We can be successful, or we can have a set-back. We had a setback in Angola. So we must accept the fact that in certain operations we will not be successful, and the fact that you have not been successful in certain operations must not be an obstacle to carrying out additional operations all over the world if the protagonists to the dispute are asking for our participation or our mediation or intervention. It is like being a hospital -- you cannot say "I do not want to take this case". There is a moral responsibility; the raison d'être of this Organization is to help Member States to solve peacefully their internal disputes and their international disputes if they are ready to accept the rules of the game.

QUESTION: I have a question on the talks between Greece and The former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. Is it true that the two parties have agreed to go into direct talks next month and that a solution is imminent?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: No. They will be here next month, on 13 June, and I have a long report from Mr. Cyrus Vance [Special Envoy of the Secretary-General]. Both of the parties have agreed to discuss the matter with him here. It was not mentioned whether this would be through direct talks or through indirect talks through Mr. Vance.

But I am hopeful, and I believe that their presence here in New York over the next few days will help to solve this problem.

QUESTION: I have a question about Ambassador Larsen. What do you expect him to accomplish in the Middle East and how long do you expect him to be in this assignment?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: One of the problems in Gaza and Jericho is that you have too many actors, too many donors. You have, first of all, the various programmes of the United Nations: UNDP [United Nations Development Programme], UNRWA [United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East], UNICEF [United Nations Children's Fund]. Secondly, you have the different United Nations agencies: UNESCO, ILO, the World Bank. Then you have the different donor countries that are offering assistance on a bilateral basis. Then you have the European Union, which is also offering assistance. If we continue like this, it will be a mess.

We need someone who will coordinate among the different donors on the ground; his role will be to coordinate first within the United Nations, the different programmes, agencies and funds of the United Nations, and secondly -- because this is on a voluntary basis -- between the United Nations and its various organs and the different agencies and regional organizations, such as the European Union. Thirdly, he will coordinate between the United Nations and the NGOs [non-governmental organizations]. This work will be one of coordination.

The important thing is that he has the support of both the Israeli Government and the Palestinians. Both Shimon Peres and Yasser Arafat were quite pleased that he was selected. This is already a positive element in the work he will do, because he will also have to coordinate between the Israelis and the Palestinians.

QUESTION: When did the idea of appointing Mr. Larsen originate, and could you say a little more about his qualifications?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: Regarding his qualifications, he was the man who participated in and helped to promote the agreement between the Israelis and the Palestinians. Thus, he has the trust and confidence of both of the two main protagonists in this dispute. This, as such, is a very important qualification.

Secondly, he was involved and was asked by the Norwegian Government to deal with the problem of assistance in Gaza, Jericho and the West Bank; so he has already played a very important role, he is now playing a very important role, and he will play a very important role within the United Nations system.

QUESTION: I note what you have said about the failure in Rwanda so far. In the light of the talks that have been held in Rwanda by Mr. Iqbal Riza and General Baril, how do you now assess the prospects of getting a larger operation going, of getting the troops and equipment, and what kind of operation do you think might eventually be possible?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: To date, only three countries have officially confirmed that they are ready to offer troops. They are Ghana, Ethiopia and Senegal. I am in contact with other African countries, among them Egypt and Nigeria. Today we already have a total of 2,100 troops. I hope to obtain troops from Zimbabwe as well. The problem is equipment. We are in contact with certain donor countries to obtain equipment and to obtain the transport of the troops in Kigali and inside Rwanda.

What will the role of those troops be? I believe that number one is to contain the deterioration of the situation. The fact that troops are there will reinforce the position of the mediator and may help to protect both Tutsis and Hutus. But their mandate is limited. It is not our intention to impose a certain formula on the two protagonists to the dispute.

We need the agreement of the two protagonists, and then we will have to play the role of catalyst, of mediator. But I believe that the presence of the troops inside Kigali, inside Rwanda, may help -- again, I use the phrase "may help" -- to contain the degradation and the deterioration of the situation. It may help to contain the situation within Rwanda and to avoid this having a kind of negative effect in Burundi, in Zaire and even in Tanzania.

QUESTION: The Lebanese Government sent you a letter regarding the kidnapping of Dirani [Mustafa Al-Dirani] by Israel from Lebanon asking you to play a role in trying to bring him back and return him to Lebanon. My question has three parts. One, are you ready to play such a role? Do you find for yourself a place to do such a thing in response to the Lebanese Government? Secondly, in the discussions you had with Mr. Peres, was there any confirmation of what we heard in press reports, that Dirani had something to do with the kidnapping of Colonel Higgins, who was, of course, a United Nations officer at the time? And, thirdly, do you condemn this act -- a State going into another State for kidnapping purposes?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I have discussed the problem with the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Israel. I am ready to play the role of mediator, a role of good offices, if the two parties accept this. I cannot play the role of mediator unless the two parties are willing. I know that Lebanon has said that it reserves the right to consult the Security Council, but so far it has not done so.

QUESTION: Do you condemn this act, or do you find it justifiable?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: If I have to play the role of mediator or of good offices, it is better not to say what my position is.

QUESTION: And about Mr. Higgins? What about the press reports claiming that Dirani had something to do with the kidnapping of Higgins?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I am not aware of this.

QUESTION: Mr. Secretary-General, as you know, Japan is now seeking a new permanent membership in the Security Council. Do you think that Japan is eligible for that position? What other qualifications does Japan need to be granted a seat in the Security Council? Would much more of a military contribution be needed for Japan to become a permanent member?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: When I was in Tokyo, I said that personally I am in favour of the admission of Japan as a permanent member of the Security Council. But this is a very personal point of view. The decision has to be taken by the General Assembly according to Article 108, because this requires a revision of the Charter.

Secondly, I told the Prime Minister of Japan and the Japanese public that to be a permanent member of the Security Council there is no obligation to participate in peace-keeping operations. Up until five years ago, one of the rules of peace-keeping operations was that the permanent members must not participate in them. Participation of the permanent members in peace-keeping operations is something new, because before we had only two or three peace-keeping operations, and now we have 17. This is why we need that participation. But there is no obligation.

The participation of any Member State in a peace-keeping operation is a purely voluntary action. There is no obligation because you are members. There is a financial obligation in the budget, but Member States have no military obligations. They are free to participate or not. The proof lies in the fact that certain Member States, after participating in a peace-keeping operation, decided to withdraw their troops -- so they are free.

QUESTION: You say that there is no legal obligation for Japan to make a military contribution. So Japan is eligible for permanent membership?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: Yes, certainly it is eligible. But the problem is that you need a revision of the Charter, and that has to be decided by the General Assembly of the United Nations.

QUESTION: The Italian Foreign Minister recently offered troops for Yugoslavia and troops for Rwanda. The troops for Yugoslavia were offered with some conditions, but there were no conditions for the troops for Rwanda. Why has no request yet been made by the United Nations for these troops?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: We welcome the troops of Italy, both in Bosnia and Rwanda. But I just want to inform you that we have received no formal offer of troops for Rwanda to date. It has been published in the press, but we have received no formal offer. But we would welcome them, both in Bosnia and in Rwanda.

QUESTION: It seems that they are waiting for a formal invitation.

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I now say publicly: we need the troops. This is a formal invitation.

QUESTION: After two years of war in Bosnia, has the Security Council ever defined the character of this war? Is it a civil war? Is it aggression? Has Serbia ever invaded Bosnia? If not, why do we have these most rigorous, sadistic sanctions against Yugoslavia, against Serbia and Montenegro, and what are the prospects of lifting them?

THE SECRETARY-GENERAL: I believe that you have to put this question to the Security Council. It decides when to lift the sanctions and whether or not to lift them. I believe that this has been discussed and will be discussed in the various meetings to take place in the next few weeks as an incentive for obtaining a solution to the problems.

Certainly, once an agreement is concluded between the protagonists of this dispute, one of the first steps will be to lift the sanctions against Serbia and Montenegro.

QUESTION: Back to Rwanda, can you give us an idea of why there has been so much difficulty getting troops? Is it because of the argument in the Security Council or is that just an excuse? Secondly, is there anything settled yet on the concept of going to border areas, Kigali and so forth?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I believe that the explanation is the simplest one: there is a fatigue of the Member States. They used to get involved in two or three operations. Now we have 17 operations. This is the first explanation.

The second explanation is a financial one. The Member States and donor countries are in economic crisis and are less ready to participate in these operations, because they cost a lot. Public opinion is not helping the various Governments and Member States to participate in this kind of peace-keeping operation.

The end of the cold war may be another explanation. As long as we had a cold war, everybody was interested in what was going on somewhere in Cambodia, Angola or Mozambique. Now, the international community is less interested.

Thirdly, maybe we have not been successful in convincing the Member States that what we are spending on peace-keeping operations today represents less than 0.1 per cent of what was spent by the international community during the cold war, and that many of the confrontations going on -- not all, but many of them, such as those in Angola, Mozambique, Cambodia and El Salvador -- are practically results of the cold war. There are no arms factories in Somalia, in Cambodia or El Salvador. All those arms are the result of the cold war.

So we have a kind of special moral responsibility to continue to do whatever ought to be done to help to solve all those disputes peacefully. But there is a fatigue among the donor countries and that is the main explanation.

As for the second part of your question, we are in favour of the two approaches. You need a presence in Kigali, inside the country, just as you need a presence on the border to protect the refugees.

QUESTION: The United States is on record as having asked the United Nations to curtail its involvement in peace-keeping operations. In that reference, the United States Ambassador is on record as having said in news reports that the United Nations operations in Kashmir should be ended. What is your position on that? Can that be ended by the Secretariat, or is a decision of the Security Council needed?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I believe that we have a very limited presence of United Nations observers on the border inside Pakistan. This was decided many years ago, and if you want to put an end to this presence, you will need a resolution of the Security Council.

QUESTION (interpretation from Arabic): How is the United Nations going to act with regard to the sanctions against Iraq? And, another question: Has the United Nations made efforts to stop the civil war in Yemen?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL (interpretation from Arabic): In response to the first question, the decision should be taken by the Security Council, and I do not have any information concerning the report submitted by its special committee on sanctions against Iraq.

As to the question on the civil war in Yemen, it would be necessary for a State or a group of States to ask the Security Council to intervene. I hope that some nations will ask the United Nations to do so in order to find a peaceful settlement to that war and to establish peace in that Arab country.

QUESTION: We have been talking about a lot of dangers and crises around the world. Let's talk about one right here in this very building. Let's talk about smoking. There is a bill in the United States Congress which would ban smoking in all public places. The World Health Organization (WHO), a United Nations organization, bans smoking. What is your opinion? You can hear the effects of the cigarette smoke in this building on my voice. Do you feel smoking should be permitted inside the United Nations, and if so, why? And will you fight to ban smoking here should that bill in Congress pass or should the Staff Union rules, which do not go far enough, actually be adopted?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: Certainly, I am in favour of banning smoking within the building of the United Nations, but I am not so sure that I will be able to do it. It is important. I believe that one is not allowed to smoke in the General Assembly, but in the Security Council they are allowed to smoke.

QUESTION (interpretation from French): Are you going to stand for a second term of office?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL (interpretation from French): You can ask me that question in 1996, and the answer will depend on my physical capacities. To be perfectly honest, if I am feeling fit I will say "Yes". On the other hand, if in two and a half years I no longer feel up to it, then I will not seek a second term.

QUESTION: Your "Agenda for Development" has gone through 14 or 15 drafts, and it is no secret that you have been fairly unhappy with all of them. Are you happy with the draft that has finally been issued? If not, what do you find wanting in it?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: Look, the final draft of "Agenda for Development" is just a paper of reflection. It is the first step. The second step must be the reaction of the members of the General Assembly. On the basis of their reactions...

QUESTION: But, Sir, is the quality of the reflection satisfactory to you?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: Oh, yes, certainly. I am 100 per cent responsible for the quality of this reflection. It is a non-classical approach, if you will, but I believe from my point of view that this is the real way to solve the problem of development -- that unless we have a comprehensive approach, we will not be able to solve the problem of development.

To give you an example, if you have a resolution concerning sanctions -- and we have now five countries on which sanctions have been imposed, such as Iraq, Libya, Haiti and Serbia and Montenegro -- this creates a problem in the field of development, not only for those countries but for their neighbours. So, unless we have a comprehensive approach, we will not be able to find a solution to the problem of development.

QUESTION: (interpretation from Arabic): Have you issued any statement concerning Lebanon, especially given that Israel has violated the sovereignty of Lebanon? I would like to know the position of the Secretary-General concerning these hostilities. Is there any justification for them?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: (interpretation from Arabic): What's important is to find a solution. Of course, there has been an offence, but I think that the important thing is to find a solution to the problem.

QUESTION: Mr. Secretary-General, if the Contact Group on Bosnia does not produce results and if the French pull out their troops, as they are now saying they will, what will your policy on Bosnia be? Will you give up, or will you accept offers of troops from Islamic countries? And what is the fate of ultimatums in Bosnia? Reading your recent report on Gorazde, it seems that you are supporting a political settlement now. But do you see a danger that that in fact could only confirm the principle of changing borders through the use of military power, and even the results of ethnic cleansing in Bosnia and Herzegovina?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: One must never give up. One must continue to help, to assist, to continue to play the role of mediator. Secondly, we already have Muslim troops on the ground, Jordanian troops, Egyptian troops and Turkish troops. Pakistani troops and Bangladeshi troops are also coming. So that is not the problem. The problem is to continue.

Among the different approaches, and I am not saying that this must be the solution, is something I have been proposing for the last year: an international conference. Maybe an international conference would help in the event that the Contact Group could not find a solution. But I believe that the Contact Group is doing a good job and that we will be able to find in the next few weeks a solution, or the beginning of a solution, to this problem.

QUESTION: Once you have received the report of Mr. Horacio Boneo, Director of the Electoral Assistance Unit, after his working visit to Mexico, what can you tell us about his findings, and what would be your opinion on the Mexican electoral register?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: To be quite honest, I have not read his last report. I will be able to give you an answer tomorrow or the day after when I have read it. I know that we will be lending technical assistance to the elections in Mexico, but I have not read the report yet.

QUESTION: Sir, you said that if you feel fine in two and a half years you will agree to a second term and mandate. I think I remember that when you were first elected, you said you would serve only one term. What led you to change your mind?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I believe that only stupid people do not change their minds.

QUESTION: How successful or unsuccessful do you feel the United Nations has been at peace enforcement? Do you feel that peace enforcement has any future in the United Nations system if prevention for some reason does not work, as I know you hope it will?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: I believe that the question of what the troops are required to do is one of the criteria which may be used. If the peace enforcement comes between Chapter VI and Chapter VII of the Charter, if it is related to the protection of humanitarian assistance or of a group of refugees -- in other words, is on a small scale -- then the United Nations can do it.

But if peace enforcement is needed on a large scale -- more than 30,000 or 40,000 -- the United Nations does not have the capacity. Thus the United Nations must cooperate either with an ad hoc group of Member States, as in the case of Iraq and Kuwait, or with a regional organization, as in the case of the cooperation now existing between the United Nations and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

But today the United Nations does not have the capacity for a huge peace enforcement operation -- more than 30,000; 40,000; 50,000. If it is peace enforcement related to a small operation -- in other words, something between Chapter VI and Chapter VII -- we may be able to do it.

QUESTION (interpretation from French): I am very disappointed that you have hardly spoken French at all. I am frustrated because those of us who work in radio need the sound of spoken French.

The SECRETARY-GENERAL (interpretation from French): I will try to ease your frustration by answering you in French.

QUESTION (interpretation from French): I would have liked you to say something about Rwanda in French, but since that subject has already been discussed at length, could you please talk to us about Zaire and what you are attempting to do there. Is this preventive diplomacy?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL (interpretation from French): We have a Special Envoy, Mr. Lakhdar Brahimi, the former Foreign Minister of Algeria, who is officially entrusted with the task of mediating between the various protagonists of the conflict inside Zaire. He has carried out several missions and is in contact. Then we have the "friends", a group of three friendly countries, France, Belgium and the United States, with whom I met yesterday or the day before. So we are dealing with Zaire.

We are trying very discreetly to promote a solution, taking into account the viewpoints of both Mr. Tshisekedi and President Mobutu. This is a slow and difficult process, but I can assure you that the action of the United Nations continues in Zaire within the framework of preventive diplomacy.

QUESTION (interpretation from French): Is it not too late?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL (interpretation from French): I do not think so. On the contrary, I can tell you without going into detail that progress has been achieved through our efforts.

QUESTION: You mentioned a while ago that you are still hoping for some satisfactory result in regard to Bosnia. Actually, at the moment, Bosnia, a sovereign and independant Member State of the United Nations, is dismembered. I doubt that we can turn the clock back.

Do you think that your description of the conflict in Bosnia as "a rich man's war" inspired the nations of the world to show apathy, so that they did nothing, and that your own representatives -- one at the negotiating table and the other in the field -- failed? Do you think that you are to be blamed? If not, then who is?

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: Let us adopt a comprehensive approach to the problem. Bosnia is only one of the elements. You also have Krajina, between Croatia and Serbia; you have Macedonia; you have the problem of Kosovo. You have a group of problems. You have the problems of the embargo, and the problem of 2 million refugees and displaced persons.

We have the problem of humanitarian assistance, which we are still able to provide in different cities inside the country. We have the problem of the safe areas. So if you take all of these problems, we have been successful in certain elements of the solution, and we have not been successful in certain other elements.

But, as I mentioned at the beginning of this conversation, the fact that we have had a set-back must not be a reason not to continue. We have to continue. We now have not only the two representatives -- the representative of the European Union and the representative of the United Nations -- but also a third representative on the ground: Mr. Akashi [Yasushi Akashi, Special Representative of the Secretary-General], who is coordinating political efforts, humanitarian assistance and the military presence.

It will take time. It is a long process, and I believe that we must continue. We must continue in spite of all the difficulties, in spite of all the criticisms. We have no choice but to continue on the diplomatic level to provide a framework for negotiation, to continue the negotiations until we find a solution. And I am less pessimistic than you are. I believe that we will be able to find a solution.

QUESTION: I admire your optimism, Sir, but there is no country to talk about now. It is dismembered. They are talking only about who is going to get what share, what percentage. There is nothing to talk about any more.

The SECRETARY-GENERAL: No, I believe that we will be able to find a solution.

a) USAID /RPE

i) This represents a grant to the Government of the Republic of Uganda by USAID for the Rehabilitation of Productive Enterprises (RPE). It was granted to finance the purchase of project support commodities and technical assistance. It is managed on a revolving fund basis.

The fund is under the management of Bank of Uganda as executing agent. The Bank of Uganda approves all sub-projects to be financed. The Bank is one of three participating Intermediate Credit Institutions (ICI's) through which the lending to sub-projects is channelled.

The funds are repayable to the Bank of Uganda over periods between eighteen months and five years. The interest earned from sub-project loans is shared in agreed proportions between Bank of Uganda and the participating ICI's.

ii) The USAID / Rural Economic Recovery Project (RERP) grant was provided by USAID through Agricultural Co-operative Development International for the financing of loans to small farms, in particular primary co-operative societies, in the Luwero Triangle. It is a revolving fund and therefore the interest earned is reinvested after the deduction of an agreed level of administration costs incurred by the bank.

iii) USAID also provided Shs 30 million as a revolving fund to be lent to farmers in Northern Uganda. Both funds are administered under Rural Farmers Scheme.

b) European Economic Community (EEC)

Small and Medium Enterprises Fund (SME)

This comprises of the proceeds of a grant to the Republic of Uganda from the European Development Fund to finance a line of credit to the Uganda Commercial Bank. The European Development Fund contributed ECU 4.3 million for on-lending to agricultural and industrial small and medium enterprises as well as for technical assistance and advisory services. The on-lending portion of the fund of ECU 3,860,00 is managed on a revolving fund basis with the interest being reinvested in the fund.

c) African Development Fund (ADF)

Agricultural line of credit to Uganda Commercial Bank

The agricultural line of credit of UA 15 million was granted on 31 December 1987 to finance the foreign exchange cost of projects in respect of crop, livestock and fisheries development by small scale farmers and fishermen in rural areas. The Bank contributed UA 4.96 million as local costs. This line of credit has been guaranteed by the Government of Uganda.

The principal amount of the credit is repayable over 15 years, following a grace period of five years which expires 31 December 1992, in thirty equal and consecutive instalments semi-annually. It is subject to a service charge of 3/4 of 1% of the amounts disbursed and outstanding from time to time and a special commitment charge. Both charges are payable semi-annually on 1 January and 1 July of each year.

d) World Food Programme (WFP) Dairy Development Committee (DDC) RFS Fund

These funds were provided to the Bank's Rural Farmers Scheme by DDC from funds generated by the WFP projects UGA 3325. They are for the provision of loans to small dairy farmers under the terms of the Memorandum of Understanding between the DDC and the Bank dated 14 April 1988. The amount allocated throughout the five years of the project is subject to periodic review but is expected to be 12.5% of the total WFP generated funds or Shs 265,000,000 out of which Shs 179,453,136 has so far been received.

The Scheme operates on a revolving fund basis and the interest accruing from lending operations is reinvested in the fund.

e) International Development Association (IDA)

The funds were provided to allow the Bank to finance, through loans, project for the rehabilitation of specific small scale industrial developments. The proceeds of the credit were originally authorised, in the equivalent of US $ 1,250,000 as the Uganda Government's equity contribution to the Bank's capital. A loan to the Bank of the equivalent of US $ 3,750,000 was also made. Subsequently, a further US $ 2,000,000 out of the loan portion was allocated, for use by the Bank, as paid up share capital. The capital contribution is credited as paid up capital upon repayment by the sub-borrowers from the Bank. The remainder of the loan (US $ 500,000) is repayable to the Uganda Government over ten years including four years of grace.

The loan bears interest of 6.5% p.a. the Bank charges sub-borrowers a foreign exchange risk fee of 1% p.a. on the principal of the sub-loan. This charge is payable on 1 April and 1 October each year. The foreign exchange risk is borne by the Government.

The funds were provided to enable the Bank to carry out part of the Agricultural Rehabilitation Project. Under a subsidiary loan agreement (Agricultural Rehabilitation Project) the Bank received the Uganda currency equivalent of US $ 29.1 million to finance sub-loans for the rehabilitation of crop processing facilities and strengthen its own management procedures.

14. CAPITAL COMMITMENTS

There were no capital commitments at either 30 September 1992 or 30 September 1991.

15. CONTINGENT LIABILITIES

Contingent liabilities, which cannot be quantified, arise in the normal course of business on transactions against which there are third party counter liabilities. In addition there are also liabilities under forward exchange contracts. It is not envisaged that any irrecoverable liability will arise from these transactions.

16. GOING CONCERN

The accounts have been prepared on a going concern basis on the assumption that the Bank will obtain the necessary financial resources to meet its requirements as indicated in the 1993/94 Uganda Government Budget, extracts of which are set out below.

a) Using the Financial Sector Adjustment Credit form World Bank, the Uganda Government has initiated restructuring of the Bank. UCB will be recapitalised and its non-performing loans of Shs 32.2 billion will be removed from its books to a trust set up solely for the purpose of loan recovery. The Government will compensate UCB for the loss of loan income by issuing a long term bond in an equivalent amount.

b) In addition, the Government will inject new paid up capital of Shs 4.3 billion.

Management feels that after the restructuring as detailed above, the Bank will have adequate financial resources to meet its obligations as and when they fall due.
