Dear Mr. Secretary-General:

We read earlier in the year that you enjoy and appreciate the art of calligraphy. In efforts to promote peace and harmony, you had expressed how "calligraphy is not only an art form, but also a kind of tool that helps people communicate with each other; that the essence of calligraphy cultivates moral character and nourishes human nature, and helps make friends with people from different countries and backgrounds."

Johnny Lu, a calligrapher and world peace advocate, believes as you do, that through this art form, peaceful relations through cross cultural awareness can be promoted, and through calligraphy, he hopes to share in the harvest of a more harmonious world.

Thus, with mutual appreciation of the deeper meaning inherent in calligraphy, and in honor of the many years of your persevering peace work globally, we would be honored to extend your work in promoting understanding and harmony through the art of calligraphy, as this practice will eventually blossom into something far more invaluable - peace in every individual's hearts.

We would be delighted to teach young people, UN organizations (such as UNICEF) and NGOs, how calligraphy can promote deeper understanding and sustain world peace between Eastern and Western cultures. We would appreciate any thoughts you may have on how together we can use calligraphy to promote this message of peace.

Yours respectfully,
