

INTEL CORPORATION

Statement of Support for WELCOM

"The World Economic Forum is taking a major step forward in bringing communications technology to the leaders of global business and governments with the introduction of the WELCOM Network. This network based on computer and communications technology can become an integral part of leadership through work, education and government. Role modeling and leadership should start at the top, and the use of the WELCOM Network starts with the fingertips of the World Economic Forum members today," said Andy Grove, CEO of Intel Corporation.

Intel, the world's largest chip maker, is also the world's leading manufacturer of personal computer, networking and communications products. Through innovative technology, Intel is committed to improving the networking experience for PC consumers. Additional information is available at www.intel.com.

###

IN PARTICIPATION WITH:

