Note to the Secretary-General

RENEWAL OF BNUB'S MANDATE AMIDST POLITICAL CRISIS

RECEIVED
Confidential FEB 21 2014

14-01492
EXECUTIVE OFFICE
OF THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

- 20/02/14
1. On 13 February, the Security Council adopted resolution 2137 (2014) renewing the mandate of BNUB until 31 December 2014, and requesting the preparation of BNUB's transition and as transfer of appropriate responsibilities to the UN Country Team by 31 December 2014, as requested by the Government of Burundi (GoB). Responding to the request of the GoB for an electoral observer mission, the Council also asked you "to establish such a mission to follow and report on the electoral process in Burundi immediately at the end of BNUB's mandate", and further requested you to report it before, during and after the 2015 elections."
 2. The Council's negotiations centred on the term of BNUB's mandate and the electoral observer mission. While France, UK, US and Luxembourg favoured a 12-month renewal, Russia supported by China, Rwanda, Nigeria, Chad and Argentina insisted on heeding the request of GoB to end BNUB's mandate on 31 December 2014.
 3. Russia insisted on the insertion of the word "such" in reference to an electoral observer mission, the limiting the mandate of the mission to observation and, depending on the interpretation, excluding good offices and facilitation. However, in its explanation of vote, the US noted that it saw the electoral observer mission as playing an "important good offices role as a confidence-building and diplomatic incentive," and looked forward to its "independent assessment of the overall political and technical conduct of elections".
 4. The Security Council resolution came amidst a deepening political crisis on the ground following the dismissal of Burundi's First Vice President by presidential decree, and the subsequent resignation of three ministers from Union pour le Progrès national (UPRONA), a junior party in the governing coalition perceived as Tutsi party, while Conseil, national pour la défense de la démocratie-Forces de défense de la démocratie CNDD-FDD is seen as Hutu party. UPRONA has accused the ruling predominantly Hutu-led CNDD-FDD of upsetting the principles of the Arusha Accords, the delicate power-sharing agreement that has kept Burundi at peace since 2005. The row between UPRONA and CNDD-FDD has centred on constitutional amendments proposed by the latter that could allow President Nkurunziza a third term and change the ethnicity-based power-sharing arrangements. CNDD-FDD officials argue that the existing constitution was for the transition and needs to be updated to reflect the evolution of the political scene.
 5. The crisis drew reactions from a wide range of actors across the political spectrum, and beyond ethnic lines.
 6. Despite attempts by SRSO Onanga-Anyanga to help defuse the situation, the crisis has continued to degenerate. On 14 February, President Nkurunziza appointed Prosper Bazombanza from UPRONA as his First Vice President, followed by the appointment on 18 February of three Ministers, also from UPRONA, to replace those who had resigned earlier. All but one of UPRONA's 17 members of parliament boycotted the vote at the National Assembly to endorse Bazombanza's nomination. The "legitimate" UPRONA leadership indicated it does not recognise the new First Vice President and Ministers as members of their party.

7. By dividing and weakening UPRONA, the ruling party is acting consistent with its objective of redrawing the Burundian political map away from the power-sharing arrangement enshrined in the Arusha Accords. BNUB assessed that the current situation is a direct consequence of the boycott of the 2010 elections, which resulted in an overwhelming majority for the CNDD-FDD in both the National Assembly and Senate.

8. As evidenced by the current crisis, the general elections in 2015 will be a litmus test for the country's long-term stability. In this regard, the UN electoral observation mission and a reinforced UN Country Team should form the basis of a UN conflict prevention strategy for Burundi. To that end, and notwithstanding the title of such a mission, the mission should be established as soon as possible to provide good offices functions to help ensure the successful conduct of the general elections in 2015. The support of key member states, including those in the Great Lakes region, will be essential to help Burundi manage the pre-electoral period, which appears already fraught with challenges. DPA has initiated BNUB transition planning, and discussions on the mandate of the electoral observation mission.
