Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders among different types of workers. The study included 600 male employees from three companies in the metal industry. Data were collected by means of a self-administered questionnaire. The results showed that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among workers who performed manual work than among those who performed nonmanual work. This finding suggests that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders is related to the type of work performed.
