THE UNITED NATIONS AND THE SITUATION IN RWANDA

BACKGROUND

Fighting between the Armed Forces of the Government of Rwanda and the Rwandese Patriotic Front (RPF) first broke out in October 1990 across the border between Rwanda and its northern neighbour, Uganda. Despite a number of cease-fire agreements thereafter, hostilities resumed in the northern part of the country in early February 1993. These interrupted comprehensive negotiations between the Government of Rwanda and RPF, which were supported by the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and facilitated by the United Republic of Tanzania.

In support of resumption of the negotiations, Rwanda and Uganda, in separate letters to the President of the Security Council on 22 February 1993, called for the deployment of United Nations military observers along the 150-kilometre common border in order to prevent the military use of the area, especially the transportation of military supplies. RPF control of the border area had been extensive.

Following consultations of the Security Council on 24 February concerning these letters, United Nations Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali decided to send a goodwill mission to Rwanda and Uganda. He instructed the mission to examine all major aspects of the peace process including the possibility of deploying military observers along the border. The goodwill mission carried out this mandate from 4 to 18 March 1993.

Meanwhile, efforts by OAU and Tanzania led to a meeting between the Government of Rwanda and RPF from 5 to 7 March at Dar-es-Salaam, the capital of Tanzania. In a closing joint communiqué, the Government of Rwanda and RPF pledged their commitment to a negotiated settlement and agreed to reinstate the cease-fire on 9 March and to the resumption of peace talks in Arusha, Tanzania. They also committed themselves to providing adequate security and protection to displaced persons.

On 12 March 1993, the Security Council, by its resolution 812 (1993), called on the Government of Rwanda and RPF to respect the renewed cease-fire, to resume negotiations, to allow the delivery of humanitarian supplies and the return of displaced persons, and to fulfil the obligations and commitments the parties had made in the past. The Council also welcomed the goodwill mission the Secretary-General had sent to Rwanda and Uganda. Finally, it asked him to examine the requests of those two countries for the deployment of observers along their common border.

The Secretary-General dispatched a technical mission to the border area between Rwanda and Uganda which visited Uganda from 2 to 5 April and Rwanda on 6 April. It reported that it would be possible to deploy United Nations military observers to monitor the border between Uganda and Rwanda and verify that no military assistance — lethal weapons, ammunition and other material of possible military use — was being provided across it. It was decided that deployment of the observers would be on the Ugandan side of the border only.

THE SECURITY COUNCIL AUTHORIZES UNOMUR

On 22 June 1993, the Security Council, by its resolution 846 (1993), authorized the establishment of the United Nations Observer Mission Uganda-Rwanda (UNOMUR) on the Uganda side of the common border, for an initial period of six months, subject to review every six months. The Council decided that the verification would focus primarily on transit or transport, by roads or tracks which could accommodate vehicles, of lethal weapons and ammunition across the border, as well as any other material which could be of military use.

The Council welcomed the Secretary-General's decision to support the peace-keeping efforts of OAU by putting two military experts at its disposal to help expedite the deployment of OAU's expanded Neutral Military Observer Group (NMOG) I/ to Rwanda. It also urged the Government of Rwanda and RPF to conclude quickly a comprehensive peace agreement, and requested the Secretary-General to report on the contribution the United Nations could make to assist

OAU in implementing this agreement and to begin contingency planning in the event that the Council decided that such a contribution was needed. As agreement under negotiation was signed. The request welcomed the OAU suggestion that the United Nations shifted to meeting the needs of the displaced returning home. At the same time, some 300,000 people who remained displaced continued to rely on emergency assistance in the camps.

In recommending the establishment of UNAMIR, the Secretary-General had stated that humanitarian assistance to displaced persons and refugees, as well as to demobilized soldiers, would have to be coordinated with the Mission's activities. Mine-clearance had been earmarked as a priority to ease the threat to displaced persons and to humanitarian agencies seeking to deliver assistance.

EXTENSION OF UNAMIR MANDATE

The Secretary-General again reported to the Security Council on the situation in Rwanda on 30 March 1994. He stated that continued international support for UNAMIR would depend upon the full and prompt implementation of the Arusha Peace Agreement by the parties concerned and urged them to make a determined effort to reach agreement on the establishment of the broad-based transitional Government and the Transitional National Assembly.

The Secretary-General was encouraged by the fact that, in spite of increasing tensions, the parties had maintained the process of dialogue. He believed that UNAMIR should continue to support the dialogue to resolve the remaining differences in order to complete phase I of the implementation plan and to facilitate phase II operations. Therefore, the Secretary-General recommended that the Council extend the mandate of UNAMIR for a period of six months, during which time he would keep the Council informed of the pace of progress in the implementation of the Arusha peace agreement. However, in the event that the transitional institutions were not installed within the next two months and if sufficient progress in the implementation of the next phase of the agreement had not also been achieved, the Council should then review the situation, including the role of the United Nations.

On April 5, 1994, the Security Council, by its resolution 909 (1994), expressed its "deep concern at the delay in the establishment of the broad-based transitional Government and the Transitional National Assembly" and, stating that it was "concerned at the deterioration in security in the country, particularly in Kigali," decided to extend the mandate of UNAMIR until 29 July 1994. It noted that it would review the situation within the next six weeks if the Secretary-General informed it that the transitional institutions provided for under the Arusha Peace Agreement had not been established and that insufficient progress had been made for implementation of phase II of UNAMIR's activities.

RENEWED FIGHTING IN RWANDA

On 6 April 1994, a plane carrying President Juvénal Habyarimana of Rwanda and President Cyprien Ntaryamira of Burundi crashed at Kigali airport, killing all those on board. The cause for the crash could not be determined without a full investigation, which has not taken place.

Following the deaths of the two Presidents, widespread killings having apparently both ethnic and political dimensions began in Kigali and also in other parts of the country. A civil war broke out after the air crash which led to country-wide massacres of the Hutu opposition and intelligentsia, as well as members of the Tutsi minority and other RPF supporters.

Within two weeks, the deaths were considered to number tens of thousands. According to reports at the time, the killings were started by unruly members of the Presidential Guard, and then spread quickly throughout the city. RPF units subsequently became involved in the fighting. After the provisional Government disintegrated, an interim Government was proclaimed on 8 April 1994, but it left the capital on 12 April 1994 as fighting between the armed forces and RPF intensified and established itself in Gitarama, 40 kilometres southwest of Kigali.

Victims in the violence included Prime Minister Agathe Uwilingiyimana and 10 Belgian members of UNAMIR. The Secretary-General condemned the acts of violence and attacks on the members of UNAMIR in the strongest terms.

Following the murder of the Belgian soldiers and threats to Belgian nationals, the Government of Belgium decided to withdraw its battalion from UNAMIR. UNAMIR found it impossible to carry on with its original mandate, and instead concentrated on: securing an agreement on a cease-fire to be followed by political negotiations; protecting civilians in all possible ways; negotiating a truce with the two parties to permit the evacuation of expatriates; assisting in evacuations; rescuing those trapped in the fighting; and providing humanitarian assistance to large groups of displaced persons under UNAMIR protection.

NEW MEASURES

On 14 April, the Secretary-General presented to the Security Council two broad alternatives for dealing with Rwanda, both based on the establishment of a cease-fire. The first of these was to retain UNAMIR at a reduced strength for a period of three to four weeks following the cease-fire. If the parties reached agreement on restoration of the Arusha process during this period, UNAMIR would resume its role under its mandate; otherwise, it would be withdrawn.

The second option was to withdraw the bulk of UNAMIR after a cease-fire, leaving the Special Representative and the Force Commander in Kigali to act as intermediaries for political negotiations for an indefinite period subject to review by the Security Council. About 200 to 300 UN military personnel would remain in Kigali. If the first of the two options failed, it would be possible to move to the second.

Despite direct contacts between the two sides under the auspices of UNAMIR on 15 April, both adopted rigid positions, undermining negotiations for a cease-fire. Violence continued in the streets, as did fighting between Rwandese Government Forces (RGF) and RPF forces, and UNAMIR headquarters was hit on 19 April, although there were no casualties.

On 20 April 1994, the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council that UNAMIR personnel "cannot be left at risk indefinitely when there is no possibility of their performing the tasks for which they were dispatched."

The military personnel in UNAMIR stood at 1,515 on that date, down from 2,165, while military observers numbered 190, down from 321.

The Secretary-General proffered three alternatives to the Security Council.

Assuming there was no realistic prospect of the two sides agreeing on an effective cease-fire in the immediate future, combat and massacres could only be averted by an immediate and massive reinforcement of UNAMIR and a change in its mandate to allow it to coerce opposing forces into a cease-fire. This would require several thousand additional troops and could require that UNAMIR be given enforcement powers under Chapter VII of the United Nations Charter.

Alternatively, a small group, headed by the Force Commander, would remain in Kigali to act as an intermediary between the two parties in an attempt to bring them to an agreement on a cease-fire. This effort could be maintained for a period of up to two weeks or longer, should the Council so prefer. The total military personnel would number about 270. But a full relief effort would be impossible without a cease-fire under this arrangement, the Secretary-General pointed out.

Finally, the Secretary-General noted that UNAMIR could be completely withdrawn, although he did not favour this alternative. The cost of withdrawal in human lives could be very severe, the Secretary-General cautioned.

In presenting the alternatives, the Secretary-General emphasized that the Government of Rwanda, or its successor, and the RPF bore responsibility for seeking peace. He also expressed sympathy for bereaved Rwandan families, offered condolences to the Government of Belgium and the families of the Belgian peace-keepers who were killed, and recorded his high commendation to the personnel of UNAMIR, his Special Representative and the Force Commander for their work.

On 21 April 1994, the Security Council decided in its resolution 912 (1994) to reduce UNAMIR to the numbers recommended by the Secretary-General in his second alternative. It also adjusted the mandate of UNAMIR so that it would act as an intermediary between the parties in an attempt to secure their agreement been able to deliver more than 500 tons of food in the north and 840 tons of food in the south.

The United Nations humanitarian organizations, in consultation with UNAMIR and the International Committee of the Red Cross, had agreed upon a set of principles to serve as the basis for humanitarian operations in Rwanda. These included ensuring the security of relief efforts; joint identification of distribution sites by responsible authorities and United Nations humanitarian organizations; clear identification of interlocutors to represent the authorities for discussion of humanitarian operations; acceptance by authorities of the monitoring and reporting responsibilities of the United Nations organizations regarding the distribution and use of relief materials; and an understanding that aid should be provided based on need, regardless of race, ethnic group, religion or political affiliation. Both sides subsequently agreed on the principles.

The Secretary-General recommended to the Security Council that it provide a new mandate to create UNAMIR II, which would include 5,500 troops. UNAMIR II would, inter alia, support and provide safe conditions for displaced persons and other groups in Rwanda and would help with the provision of assistance by humanitarian organizations. The force would work on behalf of displaced persons in the interior of the country, as well as on the border.

Displaced persons in the interior of the country outnumbered those in border areas or in neighbouring countries by a factor of five, the Secretary-General pointed out. In addition, if humanitarian efforts were concentrated on border areas, the protected sites could act as a magnet to people in need in the interior of the country and increase the number of displaced persons.

UNAMIR II would also monitor border crossing points and the two parties' deployment. While its rules of engagement would not envisage enforcement action, it could be required to take action in self-defence against those who threatened protected sites and populations and the means of delivery and distribution of humanitarian relief.

Deployment of UNAMIR II would be conducted in three phases over a one-month period. During the first phase, which would last for one week following the adoption of the enabling resolution by the Security Council, one full-strength battalion would ensure the protection of Kigali International Airport and other sites in the city where thousands had sought refuge. In the second phase, extending for two weeks after the adoption of the resolution, two more battalions would be deployed, along with advance elements of a support battalion and all of the force headquarters and signal squadron. The rest of the support battalion and two other infantry battalions would be deployed during the third phase, to be completed one month after adoption of the enabling resolution. The Secretary-General estimated that deployment of approximately 5,500 troops for a six-month period would cost about $115 million.

On 17 May 1994, the Security Council in resolution 918 (1994) demanded that all parties to the conflict immediately cease hostilities and agree to a ceasefire. It expanded UNAMIR's mandate to enable it to contribute to the security and protection of refugees and civilians at risk, through means including the establishment and maintenance of secure humanitarian areas, and the provision of security for relief operations to the degree possible.

It authorized the expansion of UNAMIR to 5,500 troops, and requested the Secretary-General to redeploy immediately, as a first phase, the UNAMIR military observers from Nairobi to Rwanda, and to bring up to full strength the infantry battalion currently in the country. The Secretary-General was asked to report as soon as possible on the next phase of UNAMIR's deployment, including updates on cooperation of the parties, progress toward a ceasefire, availability of resources and the proposed duration of the mandate for further review.

At the same time, the Council imposed an arms embargo on the country. It also asked the Secretary-General to present a report as soon as possible on the investigation of serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in Rwanda during the conflict and invited the Secretary-General and his Special Representative, in coordination with OAU and countries in the region, to continue their efforts to achieve a political settlement in Rwanda within the framework of the Arusha Peace Agreement.

SPECIAL MISSION VISITS RWANDA

Shortly after the Security Council adopted its resolution, Mr. Iqbal Riza, Assistant Secretary-General for Peacekeeping Operations, and Maj.-Gen. J. Maurice Baril, Military Adviser to the Secretary-General, left on a special mission to Rwanda. The purposes of the mission were to move the warring parties towards a cease-fire, to ascertain from them their views on and intentions towards the implementation of resolution 918 (1994) and to review with UNAMIR the modalities of the operations outlined in the Secretary-General's report of 13 May 1994.

The special mission was in the area from 22 to 27 May 1994, and met with officials from both sides, and with UNAMIR officials. Although both sides had given assurances that they would observe an informal truce during the visit, firing and shelling continued, especially in and around Kigali, causing the special mission to lose much time.

According to information gathered by the mission, those responsible for the killings in Rwanda included members of the Rwandan government forces, but in the main were drawn from the Presidential Guard and the interhamwe, the youth militia recruited and formed by the late President's party. Allegations by representatives of the interim Government and the Rwandese Armed Forces and the Gendarmerie that the RPF bore equal culpability for the killings were not corroborated by other sources.

The mission also found that the RPF zone was virtually empty. In the zones controlled by the Rwandan government force, however, increasing numbers of displaced persons were fleeing the RPF advance and were seeking refuge in camps in subhuman conditions. This exodus was in part due to alarming radio broadcasts from Rwandan government forces zones, especially Radio Mille Collines, which also broadcast incitements to eliminate RPF supporters.

UNAMIR'S MANDATE IS EXTENDED

On 31 May 1994, the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council that the special mission was able to obtain the agreement of the two sides to initiate talks for the establishment of a cease-fire as called for by resolution 918 (1994). RPF's insistence that it would not deal, directly or indirectly, with the de facto authorities in Gitarama was accepted by the other side. A working paper, to serve as a basis for the talks, was prepared by the special mission and the Force Commander, and the first meeting was held between military staff officers on 30 May at UNAMIR headquarters with the Deputy Force Commander acting as intermediary.

During discussions with the mission, both sides had recognized that only a political settlement could bring stability to Rwanda and there could be no military solution. However, while both sides declared that the principles of the Arusha peace agreement remained valid as a framework, each stated that the new circumstances would necessitate renegotiation of certain parts of the agreement.

Since national reconciliation was unlikely to be swift, the Secretary-General recommended that UNAMIR's expanded mandate be authorized by the Council for at least six months, with the anticipation that at least another six-month renewal would be required. He also declared his intention to establish a special trust fund to support effective rehabilitation programmes in Rwanda.

As for deployment of the expanded UNAMIR, the special mission had secured assurances from both parties of cooperation with the mandate established by resolution 918 (1994), although these would later need formalization. The implementation of phase 1 of the deployment remained urgent and should begin even before a cease-fire, the Secretary-General urged, but he added that it was unlikely to be operational for another four to six weeks. The Government of Ghana was prepared to dispatch troops immediately, but they were waiting for necessary equipment, especially armoured personnel carriers, to be made available by other Member States. The Secretary-General recommended that phase 2 also begin immediately, consid ering the projected delays in deploying the troops and equipment for phase 1, while urgent preparations for phase 3 should continue.

The repercussions of the convulsions in Rwanda were enormous, the Secretary-General said, with displaced persons in the range of 1.5 million and an additional 400,000 refugees in bordering countries. These figures would mean that over a quarter of Rwanda's population had been afflicted. Neither United Nations agencies nor non-governmental organizations had been able to begin an effective humanitarian assistance programme in zones controlled by Rwandan government forces, where authority beyond Gitarama, Gisenyi and Butare appeared to be uncertain, while more systematic humanitarian assistance programmes had begun in the RPF zone, but worked under strict RPF controls. The special mission had emphasized to the de facto authorities in Gitarama and to the Rwandan government forces military commanders the urgency of assuring conditions that would allow humanitarian assistance programmes to begin areas controlled by them.

In his report, the Secretary-General noted that while the information on human rights violations obtained by the special mission carried prima facie credibility in the light of circumstantial evidence, only a proper investigation could establish the facts and definite culpability. The efficacy of such an exercise would diminish as time weakened evidence and dispersed living witnesses.

The international community's delayed reaction to the genocide in Rwanda "demonstrated graphically its extreme inadequacy to respond with prompt and decisive action to humanitarian crises entwined with armed conflict," the Secretary-General added, and the entire system required review to strengthen its reactive capacity.

There was little doubt that the killing in Rwanda constituted genocide, since there had been large-scale killings of communities and families belonging to a particular ethnic group, but the continuing hostilities impeded a full investigation into the massacres. The Secretary-General noted that the High Commissioner for Human Rights, Mr. José Ayala Lasso, had visited Rwanda in early May, and the Commission on Human Rights had subsequently designated Mr. René Degni-Segui as Special Rapporteur for Rwanda.

In its resolution 925 on 8 June 1994, the Security Council endorsed the Secretary-General's recommendations for the deployment of an expanded UNAMIR, invited the international community to contribute generously to the trust fund for Rwanda, and demanded that all parties to the conflict cease hostilities.

Subsequently, in its resolution 935 of 1 July 1994, the Security Council, expressing its grave concern at reports of violations of international law, including genocide, requested that the Secretary-General establish as a matter of urgency an impartial Commission of Experts that would provide it with its conclusions about the evidence of these violations.

The Commission could obtain information through its own investigations or through the efforts of others, including the Special Rapporteur. The Council also called on States, relevant United Nations bodies and organizations to inform the commission within the next 30 days of substantiated grave violations.

UNOMUR'S TERMINATION AUTHORIZED

Initially, UNOMUR had restricted its monitoring activities in Uganda along the area of the border with Rwanda controlled by RPF. After RPF gained control of the entire Uganda-Rwanda border, the Mission extended its observation and monitoring activities to that area. This necessitated the readjustment of tasks and the reassignment of United Nations military observers.

UNOMUR carried out its tasks essentially through patrolling, monitoring and surveillance of the whole stretch of the operational area, involving both mobile and fixed observations as well as on-site investigations of suspected cross-border traffic. The arrival in the mission area of three helicopters in early April 1993 strengthened UNOMUR's overall operational capacity.

On 16 June 1994, the Secretary-General submitted to the Council his second progress report on UNOMUR, in which he reiterated that UNOMUR had continued to be a factor of stability in the area and had been particularly critical in recent months as UNAMIR had sought to defuse tensions resulting from the resumption of hostilities.

Nevertheless, he noted that there appeared to be little rationale for monitoring one of Rwanda's borders and not the others. As UNOMUR's activities allowed UNAMIR to address, at least to some degree, the issue of outside interference in the Rwandese civil war, he believed that UNOMUR should continue its monitoring activities until an effective ceasefire was established. The Secretary-General therefore recommended that UNOMUR's mandate be renewed for a period of three months. During that period, the number of military observers would be reduced by phases, adjusting to operational requirements. UNOMUR would be closed down by 21 September 1994.

On 20 June 1994, the Security Council adopted resolution 928 (1994) endorsing the Secretary-General's recommendations and requesting him to report to the Council on the termination of UNOMUR before the completion of its mandate.

MULTINATIONAL OPERATION IS LAUNCHED

Meanwhile, on 19 June 1994, the Secretary-General, in a letter to the President of the Security Council, reiterated the need for an urgent and coordinated response by the international community to the genocide which had engulfed Rwanda. He enumerated the offers which the United Nations had received in anticipation of the expansion of the UNAMIR mandate, as authorized by the Council in its resolution 918 (1994), and explained that the United Nations expected, in the best of circumstances, to complete the deployment of the first phase of UNAMIR in the first week of July 1994.

The Secretary-General indicated that the Security Council might wish to consider the offer of the Government of France to undertake a French-commanded multinational operation, under Chapter VII of the Charter, to assure the security and protection of displaced persons and civilians at risk in Rwanda. Such an operation would last until UNAMIR was reinforced. This would imply that the multinational force should remain deployed for a minimum period of three months. The activities of the multinational force and those of UNAMIR would be closely coordinated by the respective force commanders.

In his letter, the Secretary-General stressed that the efforts of the international community should be directed at the resumption of the Arusha peace process. In that connection, his new Special Representative for Rwanda, Mr. Shahryar Khan, former Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of Pakistan, planned to take up his assignment on July 1 1994.

On 22 June 1994, the Security Council, by its resolution 929 (1994), welcomed the Secretary-General's letter and agreed that a multinational operation might be set up for humanitarian purposes, and decided that it would be limited to two months following the resolution, unless the Secretary-General determined before then that an expanded UNAMIR was able to carry out its mandate. Acting under Chapter VII of the Charter, the Council authorized Member States to conduct the operation using all necessary means to achieve their humanitarian objectives; costs of implementing the operation would be borne by the Member States concerned.

The French initiative, named Operation Turquoise, was launched on 23 June 1994, and on 2 July, France announced that Operation Turquoise would establish a "humanitarian protected zone" in the Cyangugu-Kibuye-Gikongoro triangle in south-western Rwanda, covering about one fifth of Rwandese territory. While expressing its strong opposition to the French move, RPF did not seek confrontation with French forces which, on their side, avoided provocation.

From the start, close cooperation at all levels was established between UNAMIR and Operation Turquoise with frequent contact between both force commanders. Resolution 929 (1994) had authorized the deployment of the French force until 21 August 1994, and, on 11 July, the Prime Minister of France informed the Security Council and the Secretary-General of the French Government's decision to commence its withdrawal by 31 July.

GOVERNMENT OF NATIONAL UNITY ESTABLISHED

On 1 July 1994, the Secretary-General called for a halt to military operations in Rwanda, warning that the mass exodus of civilian populations could otherwise destabilize the region. Another call for a cease-fire was issued on 14 July 1994 by the President of the Security Council, who expressed the Council's alarm at the continuation of fighting in Rwanda.

The exodus of the population from the fighting could lead very quickly to a further humanitarian disaster, the President said, and could endanger the stability of the region. The Council demanded an immediate and unconditional cease-fire, urged the resumption of the political process in the framework of the Arusha Peace Agreement, and also urged Member States, United Nations agencies and non-governmental organizations to mobilize all available resources in order to provide humanitarian assistance.

On 18 July, RPF unilaterally declared a cease-fire, effectively ending the civil war which had broken out immediately after the deaths of the presidents of Rwanda and Burundi, and on 19 July, a broad-based Government of national unity was formed.

APPEAL FOR HUMANITARIAN SUPPORT

Meanwhile, on 22 July 1994, the Secretary-General launched a $434.8 million consolidated interagency appeal for the Rwandese crisis. Noting that the United Nations Emergency Office for Rwanda set up in April had been constantly engaged in coordinating humanitarian activities, he said the deterioration of the situation was now beyond the resources and capacity of the United Nations humanitarian agencies and non-governmental organizations. The immediate priority was to take care of the refugees who had left the country and provide humanitarian assistance for those who were still in Rwanda, he said.

The Secretary-General noted that clandestine radio broadcasts which were fanning the hatred and fear had aggravated an already dramatic situation. In addition, he said, retreating soldiers had urged and forced whole populations to leave their homes and follow them into exile, while in some cases, massacres had even been perpetrated deliberately in order to create situations of panic, chaos and fear.

He also announced that he was immediately sending the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs to Rwanda and the surrounding region to assess the situation and satisfy himself that coordination arrangements were in place. Afterwards, the Under-Secretary-General would chair a pledging conference in Geneva.

COMMISSION IS ESTABLISHED

On 25 July, the Secretary-General sent to the President of the Security Council a report by the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on the investigation of serious violations of international humanitarian law in Rwanda, in response to the Council's request for such information in resolution 918. The report included information on the visit of the Special Rapporteur, which took place from 9 to 20 June 1994.

On 26 July 1994, the Secretary-General reported to the Council that he had established a Commission of Experts pursuant to the Council's request in resolution 935 (1994). The Commission would provide the Secretary-General with its conclusions on the evidence of grave violations of international humanitarian law committed in Rwanda, including the evidence of possible acts of genocide. The Secretary-General had taken note of the similarity of the Commission's mandate to that of the Special Rapporteur, and he would take administrative steps to ensure continuing collaboration between the two. The Commission would be located at the United Nations office in Geneva, where it could benefit from the resources of the office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

The first stage of the Commission's work would be to review available information and carry out its own investigations in Rwanda. In the second stage, it would draw up its conclusions on the evidence of specific violations of international humanitarian law, and, in particular, of acts of genocide, on the basis of which identification of persons responsible for those violations could be made. In the light of those conclusions, the Commission would examine the question of the jurisdiction, international or national, before which such persons should be brought to trial.

The Secretary-General on 29 July 1994 announced that he had appointed three members to the Commission. He designated Mr. Atsu-Koffi Amega, a former President of the Supreme Court and former Foreign Minister of Togo, as Chairman of the Commission; other members were Mrs. Habi Dieng, Attorney-General of Guinea, and Mr. Salifou Fomba, Professor of International Law from Mali and a Member of the United Nations International Law Commission.

SECRETARY-GENERAL SEEKS MORE SUPPORT FOR UNAMIR

The Secretary-General on 1 August 1994 wrote to the Security Council that even though two and a half months had elapsed since the adoption of resolution 918 (1994), UNAMIR was as far from attaining the authorized troop strength as it was at the time of the adoption of the resolution, even though the Council had urged Governments to respond urgently to his request for resources for UNAMIR in resolutions 925 (1994) and 929 (1994).

While several Governments had responded positively, their offers were conditional and entailed complicated efforts to match troops from one country with equipment from another, the Secretary-General said. The result was that as of 25 July, less than 500 were on the ground. While it was understandable that the appalling events in Rwanda constituted a strong disincentive against involvement, it had to be recognized that the hesitations and consequent delays had contributed to the catastrophe.

The need for reinforcements for UNAMIR remained urgent. The Secretary-General added that he was convinced that resources to help Rwanda did exist, and what was required was the political will in the countries around the world coalescing into a collective political will at the United Nations.

On 3 August 1994, the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council that RPF had established military control over most of the country, and recalled that about 1.5 million Rwandese had sought refuge in over a two-week period in July. The swift RPF advance had the effect of causing large numbers of civilians to take flight from the areas of combat, but this displacement might well have been containable had not panic been caused by deliberately inflammatory broadcasts from radio stations controlled by the interim government.

The protracted violence in Rwanda had created an almost unprecedented humanitarian crisis. Of a total population of approximately 7 million, as many as 500,000 had been killed, 3 million displaced internally and more than 2 million had fled to neighbouring countries. The international community was confronted with four basic humanitarian challenges: to respond to the immediate life-saving needs of refugees; to facilitate the early return of those who had fled their homes; to restore basic infrastructure in Rwanda; and to ensure a smooth transition in the humanitarian protected zone established by French forces.

Among those who had fled Rwanda, an outbreak of cholera had already claimed as many as 20,000 lives, and remained a continuing threat, while the logistics of arranging the daily supply and distribution of 30 million litres of drinking water and 1,000 tons of food were daunting. It was essential to promote and facilitate the early return of Rwandese to their homes, given the conditions in the refugee camps and the need within the next two weeks to harvest the crops there.

Meanwhile, short- and medium-term rehabilitation was essential for the absorption of the returnee population as well as the resettlement of the internally displaced, including at the least restoration of electricity, the water supply and telecommunications. It was also important to restore the capacity of the Government to carry out its responsibilities.

In addition, as many as 2 million internally displaced persons were estimated to be in the humanitarian protected zone in south-west Rwanda, and to prevent an outflow of this group into Zaire, it was necessary to ensure the capacity of UNAMIR to take over responsibility in the area and to increase the humanitarian presence and activities there.

During his visit to Rwanda from 24 to 31 July, the Under-Secretary-General for Humanitarian Affairs had met with senior officials of the new Government in Rwanda to discuss how humanitarian aid could be delivered to all parts of the country and the urgent steps required to re-establish a climate conducive to the return of refugees and displaced persons. The new Government had indicated its commitment to encourage people to return to Rwanda, to ensure their protection and to permit full access to all those in need throughout the country.

UNAMIR's main tasks now were to ensure stability and security in the north-western and south-western regions of Rwanda; to stabilize and monitor the situation in all regions of Rwanda to encourage the return of the displaced population; to provide security and support for humanitarian assistance operations inside Rwanda; and to promote, through mediation and good offices, national reconciliation in Rwanda. UNAMIR had already deployed a company along the border near Goma, Zaire, as well as a number of observers in that region and in the zone controlled by Operation Turquoise. In the expectation that UNAMIR would eventually receive the 5,500 troops authorized by the Security Council, the Force Commander had planned deployment in five sectors. The Force headquarters would remain at Kigali, with the minimum units required for protection, along with specialized units for communications and logistics, as well as the field hospital. United Nations military observers and United Nations civilian police monitors would be deployed in all sectors according to operations requirements.

The principal areas of concern were in the north-west to resettle returning refugees, and in the south-west to avert possible outbreaks of violence. In the north-west, substantial numbers of the former Rwandese government forces and militia, as well as extremist elements suspected of involvement in the massacres of the Hutu opposition and RPF supporters, were mingled with the refugees in Zaire, and were reportedly trying to prevent their return. In the south-west a more volatile situation prevailed where armed elements of the Rwandese government forces had sought refuge in the French-protected zone; this situation was particularly pressing in view of the anxiety of the French Government to complete its withdrawal by 21 August. In discussions with UNAMIR, the new Rwandese Government had indicated that it would not insist on taking control of this area immediately, provided that UNAMIR would ensure its stability.

The Secretary-General said that by its failure to intervene sooner in Rwanda, the international community had acquiesced in the horrifying loss of human life and the suffering of an entire people. To make amends, the international community at the very least should ensure that those individuals responsible in their personal and official capacities for unleashing and instigating this cataclysm were brought to justice, he said.

To avoid problems of coordination, all foreign forces engaged in support of humanitarian efforts in the area should ideally be part of UNAMIR. If this was not possible, deployment of foreign forces should be authorized by the Security Council even if their mandate was purely humanitarian, and formal liaison arrangements should be established between them and UNAMIR, as had been the case with Operation Turquoise.

The Secretary-General also urged the newly installed Government to commit itself to genuine and full reconciliation. The ultimate political aim must be the installation of a broad-based system of government that would give all elements of society, irrespective of ethnic origin or social level, a sense of security and a stake in the country. The Arusha agreement still provided principles and a broad framework for establishing such a system, the Secretary-General said.

COMPOSITION OF UNAMIR

Originally, the authorized peak military strength of UNAMIR was 2,548 military personnel, including 2,217 formed troops and 331 military observers. As of 31 March 1994, UNAMIR had a strength of 2,539 military personnel from the following countries: Austria, Bangladesh, Belgium, Canada, Congo, Egypt, Fiji, Ghana, Malawi, Mali, Netherlands, Nigeria, Poland, Romania, Russian Federation, Senegal, Togo, Tunisia, Uruguay and Zimbabwe. At that time, the Mission also comprised 60 civilian police monitors from Austria, Bangladesh, Belgium, Guyana, Mali and Togo, while it was authorized to have 110 international and 61 locally recruited civilian staff.

Following the outbreak of violence in April 1994, the Security Council adjusted UNAMIR's mandate and decided to reduce the Mission to 270 military personnel. After the situation in Rwanda further deteriorated, the Council authorized an expansion of UNAMIR's mandate and authorized an increase of the UNAMIR force level up to 5,500 troops. The larger mission would include five infantry battalions numbering some 4,000 all ranks, a force support battalion of approximately 721 personnel, a military observer group of 320 officers, 219 headquarters personnel, a helicopter squadron of some 110 all ranks and 16 helicopters, 50 military police personnel and a force of 90 civilian police.

UNOMUR has a force of 81 military observers, as of 30 June 1994. Military observers are provided by the following countries: Bangladesh, Botswana, Brazil, Hungary, Netherlands, Senegal, Slovak Republic and Zimbabwe. The mission also includes 10 international and six local civilian support staff.

NOTE

^{1/} From July 1992 to July 1993, the OAU Neutral Military Observer Group (NMOG II), made up of 50 observers from OAU countries, monitored the cease-fire in Rwanda. In early August 1993, it was replaced by an expanded NMOG II force, composed of some 130 personnel.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT 17 February 1994 (S/PRST/1994/8)

At the 3337th meeting of the Security Council, held on 17 February 1994, in connection with the Council's consideration of the item "The situation concerning Rwanda", the President of the Security Council made the following statement on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council, which welcomed the conclusion of the Arusha Peace Agreement and the political will demonstrated by the Rwandese parties in implementing it, remains deeply concerned by the delays in establishing the broad-based transitional government which is one of the key points in the Agreement. The absence of such a government is an impediment to progress under that Agreement and the functioning of institutions of the State. Furthermore, it is having adverse effects on the humanitarian situation in the country, the deterioration of which is of profound concern to the international community. The speedy installation of a broad-based transitional government would facilitate the provision of more effective assistance to the populations in need.

The Security Council, taking note of the fact that the President of Rwanda has been sworn in as the interim Head of State, encourages him, in the context of that responsibility, to continue his efforts for the speedy installation of the other transitional institutions, in conformity with the Arusha Peace Agreement.

The Security Council calls on all the parties concerned to overcome their differences and cooperate fully with the Special Representative of the Secretary-General of the United Nations and the Organization of African Unity (OAU) in order to advance the process of national reconciliation. It strongly urges the establishment, without delay, of the provisional institutions provided for in the Arusha Peace Agreement.

The Security Council is also deeply concerned at the deterioration in the security situation, particularly in Kigali. In this connection, it reminds the parties of their obligation to respect the weapon-free zone established in and around the city.

The Security Council calls the attention of the parties to the consequences for them of non-compliance with that provision of the Agreement. It notes that UNAMIR will be assured of consistent support only if the parties implement the Arusha Peace Agreement fully and rapidly.

RESOLUTION 909 (1994) 5 April 1994

Adopted by unanimous vote.

Prepared in the course of the Council's prior consultations.

The Security Council,

Reaffirming its resolution 872 (1993) of 5 October 1993 establishing the United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda (UNAMIR), as well as its resolution 893 (1994) of 6 January 1994,

Recalling its resolutions 812 (1993) of 12 March 1993, 846 (1993) of 22 June 1993 and 891 (1993) of 20 December 1993,

Recalling also its statement dated 17 February 1994 (S/PRST/1994/8),

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General dated 30 March 1994 (S/1994/360),

Welcoming the valuable contribution to peace being made in Rwanda by UNAMIR,

Expressing its deep concern at the delay in the establishment of the broad-based transitional Government and the Transitional National Assembly,

Emphasizing that the Security Council, in resolution 893 (1994) of 6 January 1994, authorized the deployment of a second battalion to the demilitarized zone as recommended by the Secretary-General in his report of 30 December 1993 (S/26927), and that the international community has thus done its part in ensuring that conditions exist for implementing the Agreement,

Considering that the fact that the transitional institutions have not been established constitutes a major obstacle to the implementation of the Arusha Peace Agreement,

Concerned at the deterioration in security in the country, particularly in Kigali,

Concerned also at the deterioration of the humanitarian and health situation,

1. Welcomes the report of the Secretary-General on Rwanda dated 30 March 1994;

2. Decides to extend the mandate of UNAMIR until 29 July 1994, on the understanding that the Security Council will, within the next six weeks, review the situation in Rwanda, including the role played in that country by the United Nations, if the Secretary-General informs it in a report that the transitional institutions provided for under the Arusha Peace Agreement have not been established and that insufficient progress has been made for the implementation of phase II of the Secretary-General's plan contained in his report of 24 September 1993 (S/26488);

3. Regrets the delay in the implementation of the Arusha Peace Agreement, and urges the parties to resolve their latest differences without delay with a view to the immediate establishment of those transitional institutions still required for the continuation of the process, and particularly the implementation of phase II;

4. Welcomes the fact that, despite the difficulties encountered in implementing the Arusha Peace Agreement, the cease-fire has been respected, and commends in this respect the essential contribution made by UNAMIR;

5. Recalls nevertheless that continued support for UNAMIR, including the provision of an additional 45 civilian police monitors as described in paragraph 38 of the Secretary-General's report, will depend upon full and prompt implementation by the parties of the Arusha Peace Agreement;

6. Welcomes the continued efforts by the Secretary-General and his Special Representative to help promote and facilitate dialogue between all parties concerned;

7. Commends the efforts of Member States, United Nations agencies and non-governmental organizations which have provided humanitarian and other assistance, encourages them to continue and increase such assistance, and again urges others to provide such assistance;

8. Commends in particular the efforts of the Organization of African Unity and its agencies, as well as those of the Tanzanian facilitator, in providing diplomatic, political, humanitarian and other support for the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the Council;

9. Reiterates its request to the Secretary-General to continue to monitor the size and cost of UNAMIR to seek economies;

10. Decides to remain actively seized of the question.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

7 April 1994 (S/PRST/1994/16)

At the 3361st meeting of the Security Council, held on 7 April 1994, in connection with the Council's consideration of the item entitled "The situation concerning Rwanda", the President of the Security Council made the following statement on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council is deeply disturbed by the tragic incident that resulted in the deaths of the Presidents of Burundi and Rwanda on 6 April 1994 and the ensuing violence. The Council expresses regret at the incident. It invites the Secretary-General to collect all available information with all means at his disposal and report to the Council as soon as possible.

The Security Council is following with great concern the situation as described by the Secretariat in its oral report. There has been considerable loss of lives, including the deaths of Government leaders, many civilians and at least ten Belgian peace-keepers as well as the reported kidnapping of others. The Council strongly condemns these horrific attacks and their perpetrators, who must be held responsible.

The Council strongly condemns all these acts of violence and in particular these attacks against United Nations personnel and urges the Rwandese security forces and military and paramilitary units to put an end to these attacks and to cooperate fully with UNAMIR in the implementation of its mandate. It further demands that all measures be taken to provide security throughout the country and particularly in Kigali and the demilitarized zone (DMZ). Furthermore, the Council expresses its extreme concern at the implications for United Nations personnel and requests the Secretary-General to report on and take measures necessary to ensure their safety and security. The Council also demands that free access to the airport be restored in order to allow those who wish to enter or leave the country to do so.

The Council appeals to all Rwandese and to all parties and factions to desist from any further acts or threats of violence and to maintain the positions they held before the incident. It urges respect for the safety and security of the civilian population and of the foreign communities living in Rwanda as well as of UNAMIR and other United Nations personnel.

The Security Council earlier this week renewed the mandate of the United Nations Operation in Rwanda for a further four months, with a six-week review provision on the understanding that progress would be made in establishing all the transitional institutions under the Arusha Peace Agreement. It reaffirms its commitment to the Arusha Peace Agreement and urges all parties to implement it fully and in particular to respect the cease-fire.

The Council will remain seized of the matter.

Stressing the need for all countries to avoid any action that might exacerbate the situation in Rwanda,

Expressing its deep concern for the safety and security of UNAMIR and other United Nations personnel, and personnel of non-governmental organizations who are assisting in implementing the peace process and in distributing humanitarian relief,

1. Takes note of the report of the Secretary-General dated 20 April 1994;

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT
30 April 1994 (S/PRST/1994/21)

At the 3371st meeting of the Security Council, held on 30 April 1994, in connection with the Council's consideration of the item entitled "The situation concerning Rwanda", the President of the Security Council made the following statement on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council is appalled at continuing reports of the slaughter of innocent civilians in Kigali and other parts of Rwanda, and reported preparations for further massacres. It endorses the concern expressed by the Central Organ for Conflict Prevention, Management and Resolution of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) that the massacres and wanton killings have continued unabated in a systematic manner in Rwanda. It recalls that such killings have already been condemned by the Security Council in its resolution 912 (1994) of 21 April 1994.

Attacks on defenceless civilians have occurred throughout the country, especially in areas under the control of members or supporters of the armed forces of the interim Government of Rwanda. The Security Council demands that the interim Government of Rwanda and the Rwandese Patriotic Front take effective measures to prevent any attacks on civilians in areas under their control. It calls on the leadership of both parties to condemn publicly such attacks and to commit themselves to ensuring that persons who instigate or participate in such attacks are prosecuted and punished.

The Security Council condemns all these breaches of international humanitarian law in Rwanda, particularly those perpetrated against the civilian population, and recalls that persons who instigate or participate in such acts are individually responsible. In this context, the Security Council recalls that the killing of members of an ethnic group with the intention of destroying such a group in whole or in part constitutes a crime punishable under international law.

The Security Council reiterates the demand in its resolution 912 (1994) for an immediate cease-fire and cessation of hostilities between the forces of the interim Government of Rwanda and the Rwandese Patriotic Front. It commends the efforts by the Special Representative of the Secretary-General and the Force Commander of the United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda (UNAMIR) to mediate such an outcome, and requests them to continue their efforts in liaison with countries of the region and the OAU. It also commends the courage and determination of UNAMIR personnel in affording protection to civilians who sought refuge with UNAMIR.

The Security Council welcomes the efforts that have been made by countries of the region, with the assistance of the Organization of African Unity, to bring about an end to the fighting and the killings in Rwanda. It also commends the efforts of States, United Nations agencies, and non-governmental organizations to provide emergency humanitarian assistance to the suffering people of Rwanda.

The Security Council is deeply concerned at the situation of the many thousands of refugees and displaced persons who have been forced to flee the fighting and killings in Rwanda.

The Security Council calls on all States to assist the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and other humanitarian and relief agencies operating in the area in meeting the urgent humanitarian needs in Rwanda and its bordering States. The Council calls on States bordering Rwanda, working with the OAU, to provide appropriate protection to refugees and to facilitate transfer of goods and supplies to meet the needs of the displaced persons within Rwanda.

The Security Council calls on all Rwandan parties to guarantee the protection of displaced persons and refugees in Rwanda and refugees outside Rwanda and to ensure safe passage for humanitarian assistance.

The Security Council underlines the urgent need for coordinated international action to help bring peace to Rwanda and to alleviate the suffering of the Rwandan people. It requests the Secretary-General, in consultation with the Secretary-General of the OAU and countries of the region, to take appropriate measures to ensure that international efforts to assist the situation in Rwanda are carried out in an effective and coordinated manner, and to ensure that all relevant parties are kept fully informed.

The Security Council emphasizes the importance of Kigali airport for the provision of international relief efforts to Rwanda, as well as for the requirements of UNAMIR. It calls on the parties to allow the airport to be kept open at all times for such purposes.

The Security Council stresses the importance of ensuring that the situation in Rwanda does not affect adversely the security and stability of neighbouring countries.

The Security Council warns that the situation in Rwanda would be further seriously aggravated if either of the parties were to have access to additional arms. It appeals to all States to refrain from providing arms or any military assistance to the parties to the conflict. It states its willingness in principle to consider promptly the application of an arms embargo to Rwanda.

The Security Council reaffirms its commitment to preserving the unity and territorial integrity of Rwanda. It reiterates its conviction that the Arusha Peace Agreement remains the only viable framework for the resolution of the Rwanda conflict and serves as the basis for peace, national unity and reconciliation in the country. It calls again on the parties to renew their commitment to this Agreement.

The Security Council requests the Secretary-General:

(a) in consultation with the Secretary-General of the OAU, to report further on actions which may be undertaken with a view to assisting in the restoration of law and order in Rwanda and in providing security for displaced persons;

(b) to work with UNHCR, the OAU and countries of the region to take such preventive diplomatic steps as may be necessary to prevent the spread of violence and atrocities to neighbouring countries;

(c) to explore urgently ways of extending humanitarian relief assistance to refugees and displaced persons;

(d) to coordinate UNHCR on measures to provide humanitarian assistance to those displaced persons congregated along the borders with Tanzania, Uganda, Zaire and Burundi;

(e) to bring to its attention any information that he might receive concerning arms flows into Rwanda, and to consult the countries of the region and the OAU about the practical implementation of an arms embargo on Rwanda; and

(f) to make proposals for investigation of the reports of serious violations of international humanitarian law during the conflict.

The Security Council states its intention to consider urgently the letter of the Secretary-General dated 29 April 1994 (S/1994/518) and further recommendations that the Secretary-General may provide.

Recalling the statements made by the President of the Council on 7 April 1994 (S/PRST/1994/16) and 30 April 1994 (S/PRST/1994/21),

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General dated 13 May 1994 (S/1994/565),

Reaffirming its resolution 868 (1993) of 29 September 1993 on the security of United Nations operations,

Strongly condemning the ongoing violence in Rwanda and particularly condemning the very numerous killings of civilians which have taken place in Rwanda and the impunity with which armed individuals have been able to operate and continue operating therein,

Stressing the importance of the Arusha Peace Agreement to the peaceful resolution of the conflict in Rwanda and the necessity for all parties to recommit themselves to its full implementation,

Commending the efforts of the Organization of African Unity (OAU) and its organs, as well as the efforts of the Tanzanian Facilitator, in providing diplomatic, political, and humanitarian support for the implementation of the relevant resolutions of the Council,

Deeply concerned that the situation in Rwanda, which has resulted in the death of many thousands of innocent civilians, including women and children, the internal displacement of a significant percentage of the Rwandan population, and the massive exodus of refugees to neighbouring countries, constitutes a humanitarian crisis of enormous proportions,

Expressing once again its alarm at continuing reports of systematic, widespread and flagrant violations of international humanitarian law in Rwanda, as well as other violations of the rights to life and property,

Recalling in this context that the killing of members of an ethnic group with the intention of destroying such a group, in whole or in part, constitutes a crime punishable under international law,

Strongly urging all parties to cease forthwith any incitement, especially through the mass media, to violence or ethnic hatred,

Recalling also its request to the Secretary-General to collect information on the responsibility for the tragic incident that resulted in the death of the Presidents of Rwanda and Burundi,

Recalling further that it had requested the Secretary-General to make proposals for the investigation of reports of serious violations of international humanitarian law during the conflict,

Underlining the urgent need for coordinated international action to alleviate the suffering of the Rwandan people and to help restore peace in Rwanda, and in this connection welcoming cooperation between the United Nations and the OAU as well as with countries of the region, especially the facilitator of the Arusha peace process,

Desiring in this context to expand the mandate of UNAMIR for humanitarian purposes, and stressing the importance it attaches to the support and cooperation of the parties for the successful implementation of all aspects of that mandate,

Reaffirming its commitment to the unity and territorial integrity of Rwanda,

Recognizing that the people of Rwanda bear ultimate responsibility for national reconciliation and reconstruction of their country,

Deeply disturbed by the magnitude of the human suffering caused by the conflict and concerned that the continuation of the situation in Rwanda constitutes a threat to peace and security in the region,

2. Decides to extend the mandate of UNOMUR for a final period of three months until 21 September 1994 and agrees that during this period the number of military observers should be reduced by phases;

The Security Council,

Reaffirming all its previous resolutions on the situation in Rwanda,

Reaffirming, in particular, resolutions 918 (1994) and 925 (1994), which expanded the United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda (UNAMIR), and stressing in this connection the need for early deployment of the expanded UNAMIR to enable it to carry out its mandate,

Recalling the statement by the President of the Security Council of 30 April 1994 (S/PRST/1994/21) in which the Security Council, inter alia, condemned all breaches of international humanitarian law in Rwanda, particularly those perpetrated against the civilian population, and recalled that persons who instigate or participate in such acts are individually responsible,

Recalling also the requests it addressed to the Secretary-General in the statement by the President of the Security Council of 30 April 1994 and in resolution 918 (1994), concerning the investigation of serious violations of international humanitarian law committed in Rwanda during the conflict,

Having considered the report of the Secretary-General of 31 May 1994 (S/1994/640), in which he noted that massacres and killings have continued in a systematic manner throughout Rwanda and also noted that only a proper investigation can establish the facts in order to enable the determination of responsibility,

Expressing once again its grave concern at the continuing reports indicating that systematic, widespread and flagrant violations of international humanitarian law, including acts of genocide, have been committed in Rwanda,

Recalling that all persons who commit or authorize the commission of serious violations of international humanitarian law are individually responsible for those violations and should be brought to justice,

1. Requests the Secretary-General to establish, as a matter of urgency, an impartial Commission of Experts to examine and analyse information submitted pursuant to the present resolution, together with such further information as the Commission of Experts may obtain through its own investigations or the efforts of other persons or bodies, including the information made available by the Special Rapporteur for Rwanda, with a view to providing the Secretary-General with its conclusions on the evidence of grave violations of international humanitarian law committed in the territory of Rwanda, including the evidence of possible acts of genocide;

2. Calls upon States and, as appropriate, international humanitarian organizations to collate substantiated information in their possession or submitted to them relating to grave violations of international humanitarian law, including breaches of the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, committed in Rwanda during the conflict, and requests States, relevant United Nations bodies, and relevant organizations to make this information available within thirty days of the adoption of the present resolution and as appropriate thereafter, and to provide appropriate assistance to the Commission of Experts referred to in paragraph 1;

3. Requests the Secretary-General to report to the Council on the establishment of the Commission of Experts, and further requests the Secretary-General, within four months from the establishment of the Commission of Experts, to report to the Council, on the conclusions of the Commission and to take account of these conclusions in any recommendations for further appropriate steps;

4. Also requests the Secretary-General and as appropriate the High Commissioner for Human Rights through the Secretary-General to make the information submitted to the Special Rapporteur for Rwanda available to the Commission of Experts and to facilitate adequate coordination and cooperation between the work of the Commission of Experts and the Special Rapporteur in the performance of their respective tasks;

5. Urges all concerned fully to cooperate with the Commission of Experts in the accomplishment of its mandate, including responding positively to requests from the Commission for assistance and access in pursuing investigations;

6. Decides to remain actively seized of the matter.

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT
14 July 1994 (S/PRST/1994/34)

At the 3405th meeting of the Security Council, held on 14 July 1994, in connection with the Council's consideration of the item entitled "The situation concerning Rwanda", the President of the Security Council made the following statement on behalf of the Council:

The Security Council is alarmed by the continuation of fighting in Rwanda, which is causing a massive exodus of the population. This situation may lead very quickly to a further humanitarian disaster and endanger the stability of the region, since the flow of these refugees is seriously affecting the neighbouring countries.

In the light of this grave situation, the Security Council:

– Demands an immediate and unconditional cease-fire and invites the parties to report to the Force Commander of the United Nations Assistance Mission in Rwanda (UNAMIR) on their actions in this respect;

– Urges the resumption of the political process in the framework of the Arusha Peace Agreement and calls upon the countries of the region, the Secretary-General, his Special Representative and the Organization of African Unity (OAU) to contribute actively to it;

– Reaffirms the humanitarian nature of the secure area in the south-west of Rwanda and demands that all concerned fully respect this. It will keep the matter under close review;

– Urges also Member States, United Nations agencies and non-governmental organizations to mobilize all available resources in order urgently to provide humanitarian assistance to the civilian population in distress;

– Calls upon Member States to provide the necessary contributions in order to ensure the deployment of the expanded UNAMIR in the immediate future.

The Security Council is determined to follow very closely the development of the situation in Rwanda and remains actively seized of the matter.

MAP NO. 3717 Rev. 2 UNITED NATIONS

Office of the Spokesman

THE TRUE STORY OF UNAMIR IN 1994

In view of recently published reports in which the UN has been criticized, the following chronology of developments in Rwanda during the critical period is given to place events in their correct perspective:

Chronology of the events in Rwanda

24 September 1993, the Secretary-General reported to the Security Council on the implementation of the Arusha Accord which had been signed on 4 August. He recommended the establishment of UNAMIR and asked for 2,500 troops, including two infantry battalions of 800 troops each.

5 October, the Security Council passed resolution 872 establishing UNAMIR for a period of six months and authorizing the Secretary-General to deploy one battalion.

30 December, the Secretary-General went back to the Security Council and said, "It doesn't look good. Let's deploy the second battalion". Despite the Council's request to him in an earlier message to consider ways to reduce the maximum troop strength, he argued that, under the existing circumstances, reduction of resources could jeopardize the peace process.

6 January 1994, the Security Council agreed to the deployment of the second battalion.

11 January 1994, there was an exchange of cables. Four communications were exchanged between the Force Commander in Kigali and the Department of Peace-keeping Operations which basically resulted in the Force Commander being given permission on an ad hoc basis to assist the Government in securing areas so that illegal arms could be seized. This responded to the part of the report which said that his communications were ignored and put in a black file.

10 February, Chinmaya Gharekhan, the Secretary-General's Senior Political Adviser, briefed the Security Council about the tension and the deterioration of the situation in Rwanda. He again briefed the Council on 16 February on the same subject.

30 March, in his second report to the Security Council the Secretary-General registered alarm over the deterioration of the security situation, the resurgence of violence, the insecurity engendered by the political impasse, the rapid and dramatic deterioration of security in Kigali, the distribution of arms to civilians and the increase in ethnically motivated crimes and murders.

6 April, the plane carrying the Presidents of Rwanda and Burundi crashed near Kigali Airport killing all on board.

7 April, the interim Prime Minister was executed, and 10 Belgian soldiers serving with UNAMIR were killed. On the same day, there was an oral report to the Security Council by Mr. Gharekhan talking about the serious implications for the civilian population.

9 April, Mr. Iqbal Riza, then of the Department of Peace-keeping Operations, briefed the Council, talking about widespread fighting and disorder.

11 April, Mr. Riza again briefed the Council on the rapidly deteriorating situation throughout Rwanda.

12 April, the Secretary-General met with the Belgian Foreign Minister very late at night in Bonn and they discussed withdrawal of certain contingents. He immediately, the next day, sent a letter to the Security Council saying, we need to reinforce.

20 April, in his third report to the Council, the Secretary-General gave the Council three options. he said that the first option was the one he wanted. The second option was less desirable, and the third, he considered out. The first option was for an immediate and massive reinforcement of UNAMIR troops to stop the fighting and the massacres. That would require several thousand additional troops and would also require that UNAMIR be given enforcement powers under Chapter VII. Option B was that it would be downsized and only a small contingent would remain there as an intermediary between the powers. The third option, which he said he did not recommend at all, was that UNAMIR be completely withdrawn.

21 April, the Security Council adopted resolution 912 authorizing the reduction of the force level to 270 troops.

29 April, the Secretary-General again wrote a letter to the Security Council saying that downsizing was not the answer and that it was getting worse. "We must consider more forceful means." He said that the scale of human suffering and its implications for neighbouring countries left the Security Council with no alternative but to examine that possibility.

4 May, the Secretary-General went on nightline and called the situation genocide, and said, "something must be done or we will all be accused of genocide".

I- BURUNDI

Repatriation

The sensitization campaign set up during the Tripartite Commission meeting between Rwanda, Burundi and UNHCR in Bujumbura on 29 and 30 January continues as planned. At the Tripartite meeting it was also agreed to work on the separation of the intimidators and on 16 February, six refugee leaders from Rukuramigabo camp were separated from the rest of the refugee community and taken to a detention facility in Kirundo. However, due to the strong negative reaction from the refugee population, the authorities decided four days later to return the alleged intimidators to the camp.

Since the beginning of January 1996, some 18,149 Rwandan refugees have been repatriated from Burundi to Rwanda.

II- RWANDA

General situation

Towards the end of 1995, the security situation in Rwanda showed signs of improvements. Today, the situation throughout the country is generally calm, although infiltrations and acts of sabotage continue to be reported, particularly in the prefectures of Ruhengeri and Cyangugu.

UNHCR activities

Since June 1995, UNHCR has been continuously updating its contingency plan for the reception and reinsertion of some 10,000 refugees per day. The plan has now been submitted to the UN Humanitarian Coordinator's Office which will produce an inter-agency contingency plan for Rwanda, based on UNHCR's and incorporating elements forwarded by other UN agencies.

Repatriation

As of 27 February, 35,921 returnees had been received in Rwanda since the beginning of January 1996. Of them 18,504 were repatriated from Burundi; 1,942 from Tanzania; 900 from Uganda and 14,575 from Zaire.

On 20 February, some 3,000 refugees from Rukuramigabo camp were repatriated to Kigali south and Butare. There were no arrest at the transit centres and UNHCR has now received the authorization to continue the monitoring of the returnees in these areas.

III- TANZANIA

Arrival of refugees

The district of Ngara continues to receive new arrivals from Burundi at an average rate of 50 to 100 per day. Since early February 1996, most of the new arrivals are Burundi refugees from the north eastern provinces of Kirundo and Muyinga claiming insecurity caused by the Tutsi militia. The new refugees continue to be transferred from the border to the new holding centre of Keza. As of 15 February, Keza has a total of 29,261 refugees out of which 22,958 are Rwandan and 6,303 are Burundese. The Tanzania Government continues to accept the refugees for a temporary period on humanitarian ground.

Visit of Rwandan officials to the camps

The Prime Minister of Rwanda Mr. P.C. Rwigema and a delegation including 17 Government officials visited the refugee camps of Ngara and Karagwe on 8 and 9 February. The Rwandan delegation was accompanied by nine Tanzanian officials from Dar-es-Salam and two UNHCR staff members. The visit was followed by a third cross-border visit by refugees to the prefectures of Kigali and Byumba on 12 and 14 February. These combined efforts of the Prime Minister's visit and the cross-border visit resulted in a significant increase in the number of refugees repatriated. While on 7 and 9 February, 126 refugees were repatriated, on 14 and 16 February, 532 persons were transported to their communes of origin in Rwanda.

IV- ZAIRE

Cabinet reshuffle

On 26 February, the Zairean Government was reorganized. As a result Mr. Kamanda wa Kamanda was replaced in his functions as Deputy-Prime Minister of Foreign Affairs by Mr. Kitiwa. Mr. Kamanda wa Kamanda has been named as Deputy-Prime Minister of Interior. Mr. Malumba Mbangula, the former Deputy Prime Minister of Interior - and formerly in charge of the Camp Closure Operation - has left the Government. Out of a total of 40 Ministers, 23 have been replaced.

Repatriation

Since the beginning of the administrative closure of Kibumba (13 February) and Nyangezi (16 February) refugee camps, relatively few refugees have repatriated. A total of 1,204 from Kibumba and 236 from Nyangezi camp returned to Rwanda. Meanwhile, assistance programmes continue in both camps as well as in the rest of the 40 other camps in eastern Zaire and the situation remains calm.

Cross border visits from Zaire to Rwanda have been agreed upon and on 26 and 27 February, the first group of nine refugees from Kibumba camp visited their communes of origin in

(1) The decrease in the number of refugees in Burundi is due to the departure of some 31,000 Rwandan refugees from Mungano and Ntamba camps to Tanzania. In addition an important number of refugees from different refugee camps have recently repatriated to Rwanda.

(2) The Rwandan refugees who fled the Burundi refugee camp of Mugano and Ntamba were taken into Keza (25 km from the border).

(3) In the Kigoma region, the figure does not include some 12,000 Burundi refugees estimated by UNHCR to be living in the surrounding villages.

Rwanda. They were accompanied by UNHCR field officers and met with the mayor of Gisenyi prefecture.

Administrative Closure

According to the Deputy Head of the Camp Security Operation the situation is "exceptionally calm" in all camps of North Kivu and in particular, in Kibumba. He described the life of refugees as "more or less paralyzed" since commercial activities in both Kibumba and Nyangezi have come to a complete halt. This is not because of any action taken by the Zairian troops, or the Zairian security force working with UNHCR in the camps, but by the refugees themselves closing down their shops, restaurants and bars for fear of losing their goods.

The Deputy Prime Minister of Interior, Malumba Mbangula, (officially responsible for the operation) announced that the camp closure operation will begin in early March. He also said that representatives of UNHCR and other aid groups, who provide food and medical care in the camps, can continue to work there until the refugees have left. However, the regional authorities in South Kivu have already established the decrees needed to implement the measures to prohibit schools, religious meetings and political seminars in the camps. Mr. Mutiri, Head of the Crisis Cell, spoke of the various difficulties, financial and logistical, faced by his Government in the implementation of the operation.

In Bukavu approximately 60 military from the FAZ (Forces Armees Zairoises) remain posted around the camp of Nyangezi. They arrive each morning at approximately 09:00 and depart in the afternoon around 15:30 which allows refugees to leave and return to the camp outside these hours. Apparently there are a few commercial enterprises that are still open in the camp, but these are closed early in the evening by their proprietors. The schools are not in use and there have been discussions with the NGO Goal for their dismantling. The ZCSC continues reinforced patrols in the camp during the day and the night.

Publication of the Zairean Communique

Regarding the Communiqué of 21 February, UNHCR Representative met with Deputy Prime Minister Kamanda wa Kamanda on 23 February before departing for Addis Ababa to express UNHCR's concerns about the statement. The Deputy Prime Minister indicated, in his name and the name of his Government, that there was no conflicting view regarding the questions of refugees in eastern Zaire between his Government and the High Commissioner. With respect to the questions raised in his declaration on the actions of some staff of UNHCR and NGOs, the Deputy Prime Minister gave his assurances that no action would be taken and that the activities of UNHCR will continue as usual in the camps.

The UNDP/UNHCR Initiative in the Great Lakes Region

STATUS REPORT

The OAU-sponsored Conference on Assistance to Refugees, Returnees and Displaced Persons in the Great Lakes Region held in Bujumbura from 12 to 17 February 1995 requested UNDP to prepare and organise, in collaboration with UNHCR, a donor meeting to address the situation prevailing in the areas most affected by refugee movements.

Following are the actions taken to implement the recommendations of the Bujumbura Conference:

1. An extensive fact finding and pre-programming exercise was undertaken by UNDP in April-May 1995. During this exercise, a number of donor capitals and agency Headquarters were visited.
2. By the end of September 1995, a cooperation arrangement had been worked out between UNDP and UNHCR. A joint field mission and programme formulation exercise was carried out during October/November 1995, involving visits to the affected areas of Tanzania, Zaïre and Burundi.
3. The draft Action Plan was distributed to all donors and agencies early December 1995 and an agreement in principle was obtained for a preliminary donor consultation in the course of January 1996.
4. The informal donor meeting was held on 24 January 1996 in Geneva, with the participation of Government representatives from Tanzania, Zaïre and Burundi. OAU, UN agencies and NGO's were also represented. The purpose of the meeting was to review the proposed short-term strategy (including coordination and information arrangements) for rapid implementation activities to arrest the degradation of the environment and restore basic social and economic infrastructure and services in the refugee affected areas.
5. The donors endorsed the joint UNDP/UNHCR Initiative in the Great Lakes region and the proposed Action Plan. They especially commended the cooperation between the two UN agencies for this initiative and the participatory approach reflected in the Action Plan that targets host communities in the refugee impacted areas of Tanzania, Zaïre and Burundi. The Plan contains a portfolio of projects that are complementary to projects already being implemented. The objective was to fill the gaps and cover additional needs as identified by the various actors in the field. The Action Plan proposes mechanisms for coordination, information, rapid implementation, monitoring and evaluation of identified programmes and projects. Special attention is given to sustainability aspects and to capacity building measures for local institutions and communities. This Action Plan is part of the continuum between relief and reconstruction. While addressing the most urgent needs of the local communities in the host areas, it complements the ongoing humanitarian effort. Linkages with UNEP/HABITAT, DHA and other partners are defined in the proposed programme of action.

6. Following the endorsement of the proposed Action Plan in Geneva, UNDP proceeded with the formulation of a coordination and information management support project for the Great Lakes region. Initial funding for this project, which is in the process of approval, has been secured from UNDP's Special Programme Reserve that provides resources for countries facing special development situations. A Task Manager has also been assigned at UNDP Headquarters to support the Resident Coordinators' actions in their countries. Implementation of the coordination and information support activities is scheduled for March 1996. The proposed UNDP project aims to preserve the regional dimension of the Great Lakes Initiative and provides for a regional support mechanism. It recognises that some of the problems to be addressed know no boundaries and that any lasting solution would have to be sub-regional by nature.

7. Although the Geneva meeting was not a pledging conference, the short-term programme of rehabilitation activities (as contained in the Action Plan) estimated at some US$70.5 million was distributed to the donors for urgent consideration. Several donors already expressed their willingness to fund urgent programme activities. There is now a need to receive confirmation of the detailed commitments. It is proposed to organise regular informal donor meetings to review the progress in the implementation of rehabilitation activities and its impact on the local populations. Furthermore, the proposed information system will provide regular and standardised feedback to the donor community.

8. Immediate funding and implementation of the Action Plan on basis of the agreement reached in Geneva would ensure quick action to arrest the degradations and start rehabilitation in Kivu and Kagera. Immediate action on the short-term programme does not preclude the need for more formal and wider-ranging consultations in the near future. There is still the possibility to organise a formal donor conference for the Great lakes region, with a pledging session. UNDP is ready to organise such a conference at any agreeable time.

9. In any case, the UNDP/UNHCR short-term rehabilitation programme was conceived in relation with a possible UN/OAU conference (or any other forum) which would examine longer-term issues.

WE MUST RESOLVE THE CRISIS IN RWANDA AND BURUNDI
by Jimmy Carter

While the world's attention has been focused on the 37 deaths in Sarajevo and NATO's aerial assault on the Bosnian Serbs, there are almost 500 violent deaths in Burundi every week, and that number is expected to increase.

Burundi and its neighbor Rwanda lie between Zaire, Uganda and Tanzania in eastern central Africa. Although most of the killing is now between two major ethnic groups--Hutus and Tutsis--in Burundi, there is an escalating crisis between these same cultural groups in Rwanda.

The world looked the other way last year, when half a million Rwandans, mainly Tutsis, died in the worst case of genocide since World War II. Another 100,000 people were killed in Burundi the year before. Instead of increasing its efforts to resolve this crisis, the international peacekeeping force is being withdrawn.

Two million exiles, mostly Rwandan Hutus who fled when the Tutsis won the war, now live in crowded camps in Zaire and Tanzania. They are restive and afraid -- and a few are armed and aggressive. Militant Hutu refugees conduct night raids into Rwanda, and return to their camps in Zaire before daybreak. Some of the same Hutu leaders who are accused of genocide exercise control over fellow refugees who only want to live in peace.

Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali has appealed for an international force to separate militant from peaceful Hutu refugees and maintain security in the camps, but only Zaire has provided such assistance.

Tutsi government leaders in Rwanda feel threatened by Hutu militants from Burundi, Zaire, and Tanzania, and their army reacts with violence. These skirmishes threaten to erupt into a broadscale war.

However, these same Tutsi leaders have taken few steps toward reconciliation with Hutu refugees or encouraged their repatriation. Almost 50,000 Hutu prisoners are jailed in the most egregious conditions, a graphic demonstration of what refugees might expect from their government if they return home.

Can anything be done to resolve this crisis?

A strong military force on the border between Zaire and Rwanda could create a buffer between warring groups. In addition, the flow of weapons to refugees should be restricted, with U.N. monitors at Goma and other key airports.

Illicit mobile radio stations have been broadcasting vituperative programs from Zaire into Burundi, perpetuating tensions and inciting even more animosity. Zairian officials recently informed me that the transmissions have been stopped, but destruction or confiscation of the equipment needs to be confirmed.

Strong international peacekeepers could help. However, the Rwandan government is demanding that they withdraw, and the original force of 6,000 will be 1,800 next month and gone by December. The international community should insist that the Rwandan government approve the maintenance of adequate U.N. forces.

The United States, primarily through the Pentagon, maintains a close relationship with Tutsi leaders in Rwanda and, despite opposition of key African leaders in the area, recently prevailed upon the U.N. Security Council to lift the arms embargo against Rwanda. This has further inflamed tensions in the region. Zaire reacted by forcing some Hutu refugees back into Rwanda. Ten of thousands of Rwandan refugees fled the camps into the countryside, jeopardizing the entire U.N. humanitarian operation.

The failure to hold trials for those Hutus accused of genocide is a crippling factor in two ways. Those assumed to be guilty are seen as immune to punishment, and without these few being identified, blame is laid by Rwandan officials and others on a vast number of innocent Hutus. Indictments from the International Tribunal concerning the 1994 Rwandan genocide are long overdue, but are not expected before December. Even then, the international forum and the courts in Rwanda will likely be inadequate to conclude these key cases.

Ultimately, African leaders must be the prime source of beneficial influence on this inflamed "Great Lakes" region. The Tutsis in Rwanda and Burundi have close ties with Uganda and Tanzania respectively, and Hutus have long been associated with Zaire. All the leaders tell me that Zairian President Sese Seko Mobutu could play a key role if he were included in a concerted international effort. However, because of human rights violations and a lack of progress toward democracy in Zaire, Mobutu is almost universally condemned and ostracized by American and other western officials.

In my discussions with leaders of all these African nations, they express deep concern about suffering in Rwanda and Burundi and about the violence spreading into their own countries. But they have been frustrated in their attempts to address the crisis. A proposed meeting in Addis Ababa of Burundi political and military officials was recently canceled when some key Tutsi leaders refused to attend.

Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles Zenawi, as chairman of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), is now arranging a meeting of the foreign ministers of Zaire, Tanzania, Uganda, Kenya, and Ethiopia to coordinate their approach. Plans are also being made for later peace talks in Tanzania between contending forces from Burundi and Rwanda.

In addition to these approaches, attention must be given to basic economics, including land reform, food production, and the efficient use of the limited financial assistance that is available. The judicial systems need strong support, and tentative dialogues between the Hutus and Tutsis in both Rwanda and Burundi must be strengthened. USAID is attempting to coordinate international donor efforts in addressing some of these serious problems, a necessary prelude to peace and reconciliation. Later this month, I will visit with key African leaders, and The Carter Center will assess the overall situation.

We will attempt to help provide a positive answer to the most important question -- and the one with the most doubtful answer: Is it possible to marshal renewed involvement of the international community, including full support for a common and sustained peace effort by the regional leaders?

Our only option is to assume that the situation is not hopeless.

cf : La situation au Rwanda et au Burundi

1. Le Secrétaire général a fait son rapport oral au Conseil de sécurité le 25 juillet. Comme vous le constaterez dans la note préparée par Mme Galina Kuznetsova, le Secrétaire général s'est longuement étendu sur sa récente visite au Rwanda, au Burundi et dans la sous-région. Il me semble que deux informations complémentaires sont nécessaires pour clarifier davantage la note préparée par Mme Kuznetsova.

- a. Pour ce qui est de la réunion proposée par le Secrétaire général entre les Rwandais de la diaspora et ceux vivant au Rwanda, ce projet s'inspire de l'expérience en cours au Timor oriental. Le Secrétaire général a informé le Conseil qu'il a réussi à entamer des négociations sérieuses entre les parties indépendance et celles favorables à l'intégration de ce territoire à l'Indonésie;
- b. Pour ce qui est de la nomination d'un envoyé spécial chargé d'organiser une réunion des pays de votre sous-région, le Secrétaire général a estimé que l'expérience récente avec l'Ambassadeur Dillon et la situation qui prévaut au Rwanda et au Burundi l'ont amené à adopter une attitude plus prudente. Sans remettre en question ce projet, le Secrétaire général a estimé à juste titre que ses représentants spéciaux sur place devraient, dans un premier temps, étudier la possibilité d'une telle réunion et ses chances de succès. Il va de soi que dès que les conditions le permettront, le Secrétaire général entamera des consultations pour que cette réunion ait un effet catalyseur positif sur le processus de réconciliation au Rwanda, au Burundi et sur la paix en général dans la sous-région.

2. Du reste, comme vous le noterez, la déclaration du Représentant du Rwanda faisant suite au rapport oral du Secrétaire général invite à plus de prudence.

3. Amitiés.

Note for the file

Informal consultations of the Security Council
25 July 1995

The Secretary-General briefed the Security Council on his trip to Europe and Africa. Among other issues he reported on his visits to Rwanda, Zaire and Burundi. The main points made by the Secretary-General were as follows:

National reconciliation

During his visit to Rwanda and Burundi the Secretary-General, in addition to meeting with various governmental officials and political parties, met with representatives of NGOs. He was convinced that NGOs could play a bigger role in promoting national reconciliation. He thought that a meeting to discuss confidence-building measures between representatives of the Government of Rwanda and Rwandese NGOs, including representatives of the Rwandese diaspora, could be very useful. In this connection, President Yoweri Museveni of Uganda was ready to act as a mediator and suggested that Kampala could become the venue for such a meeting.

Refugee situation

The Secretary-General expressed the disappointment over his failure to obtain a positive response from Tanzania, Uganda and Zaire to the suggestion of the deployment of United Nations military observers in those countries to monitor the sale and or supply of arms. He informed the Council that President Mobutu, during their meeting in Zaire, revived his old idea of a tripartite meeting of the three presidents (Rwanda, Burundi and Zaire) in order to discuss the problems they faced. President Mobutu was ready to use his contacts and experience and proposed to arrange such a meeting, if the international community gave him the green light. Though bitter about his isolation, President Mobutu was ready to help solve the refugee problems.

OAU

During his meetings with the Chairman and the Secretary-General of the OAU, the Secretary-General discussed, among other issues, rapid reaction peace-keeping forces. He thought that the forces should be well trained and could be used not only in Africa but also in other regions where peace-keeping operations were needed. A joint UN-OAU meeting on the strengthening of cooperation between the UN and the OAU is scheduled to take place on 6 to 8 November 1995 in Addis Ababa. Peace-keeping forces, regional problems and other related problems would also be discussed there.

During the period of questions and comments that followed the briefing all members who took the floor thanked the Secretary-General for a comprehensive briefing and commended him on his courage. In particular, they attached great importance to his visit to Africa, which, they said, demonstrated that the UN had equal concerns about security in all regions of the world.

The UK was concerned about the illegal arms flow in the region and still strongly supported the deployment of the UN military observers.

Nigeria wanted the role of the OAU to be enhanced.

The US made an important comment regarding the embargo imposed on the former government of Rwanda. Stressing that Rwanda had the right to defend itself, she stated that the US would support the lifting of the embargo, provided that the transition of arms from inside Rwanda to outside elements was barred. The US was pleased by the Secretary-General's announcement about the setting up of the Commission of Inquiry in Burundi and hoped that the process of its establishment would be speedy.

Responding to this comment, the Secretary-General said that while in Geneva he obtained a list of candidates and will inform the Council about its composition soon.

Italy stressed that the situation in the Central African region was still fragile and that a regional conference on security was needed. He wished to know whether the Secretary-General was going to appoint a special envoy to carry out consultations about holding such a conference.

Regarding the conference, the Secretary-General said that on this issue opinions were divided. He stressed that more preparations were needed for such a conference to succeed and all political leaders had to support it. As to the nomination of a special envoy, the Secretary-General pointed out that he had once appointed Mr. Dillon as a special envoy who had consultations in the region about the conference. He did not think there was a need for another envoy but if such a need arose he would appoint one. The Secretary-General stressed that there were two SRSG, one in Rwanda and one in Burundi, who were doing a very good job and who could do whatever was necessary in that respect.

Rwanda emphasized that the Secretary-General's visit to his country was symbolic. He agreed that only Rwanda itself could find a solution as to how to achieve reconciliation, but pointed out that there were several factors hindering the return of refugees: many were held hostage, many were recruited by the former government army which was strong and well-armed.

The Secretary-General agreed with Rwanda's observations.
