THE SECRETARY-GENERAL

28 November 2007

Dear Mr. President,

I wish to refer to an exchange of letters between my predecessor and the President of the Security Council in November 2001 (S/2001/1128 and S/2001/1129) relating to the establishment of the United Nations Office for West Africa (UNOWA). I wish to refer also to an exchange of letters between my predecessor and the President of the Security Council in October 2004 (S/2004/797 and S/2004/858) relating to the extension of the mandate of UNOWA for three years, from 1 January 2005 to 31 December 2007, subject to a midterm review. In that connection, it would be recalled that on 18 May 2007, I transmitted to the Council a report prepared by an independent consultant, which reviewed the activities and performance of UNOWA (S/2007/294) for the period from August 2006 to November 2006.

The importance of the work of UNOWA has been acknowledged on several occasions, including in the Security Council's Presidential Statement adopted on 25 February 2005 (S/PRST/2005/9), following the debate of the Council on the Secretary-General's progress report on ways to combat subregional problems in West Africa (S/2005/86). The Council noted "with appreciation the enhanced cooperation among the various United Nations political and peacekeeping missions in the subregion", and encouraged UNOWA to promote an integrated and joint subregional approach to conflict prevention. Furthermore, in its Presidential Statement of 9 August 2006 (S/PRST/2006/38), the Security Council emphasized the regional dimension of peace and security in West Africa, and "encouraged the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for West Africa and the United Nations missions in the region to continue their efforts in coordinating United Nations activities to ensure their improved cohesion and maximum efficiency." On 13 March 2007, I submitted to the Security Council, at its request, a report on cross-border issues in West Africa (S/2007/143), with recommendations for enhancing United Nations inter-institution cooperation in the region on these issues.

His Excellency
Mr. R. M. Marty M. Natalegawa
President of the Security Council
New York

UNOWA has continued to increase awareness of and to facilitate concerted and integrated action on key sub-regional challenges, which the Security Council and the Secretariat consider to be among the root causes of instability in West Africa. The Office has helped formulate recommendations and strategies on how best to address those issues, notably through national and cross-border collaboration among United Nations entities in the subregion, including United Nations political and peacekeeping missions as well as governmental and non-governmental actors.

Concerning collaboration among United Nations peace missions in the subregion, as recommended by the Security Council (S/PRST/2004/17) and underscored in my predecessor's report of 2 March 2005 on inter-mission cooperation (S/2005/135), my Special Representative for West Africa continues to convene quarterly meetings between the heads of the various political and peacekeeping missions in West Africa. Those meetings have been instrumental for sharing information and perspectives on political developments in the respective mission areas and their regional impact on peace, security and stability. In addition, UNOWA continues to facilitate inter-mission cooperation at the military level through regular meetings of United Nations Force Commanders and Military Advisers, as well as at the expert level regular meetings of officers in charge of human rights, humanitarian, gender issues, Disarmament, Demobilization and Reintegration. Furthermore, UNOWA seeks to enhance synergy and complementarity with United Nations missions in the sharing of assets, notably with a view to maximizing the use of United Nations resources. In this context, the Office shares air assets with other United Nations operations and agencies in the subregion and collaborates with United Nations specialized agencies on integrated cross-border strategies and joint activities, often with the involvement of civil society organizations, as appropriate.

During its current mandate, UNOWA has continued to strengthen its cooperation with ECOWAS, as defined in a joint work plan covering: good offices and participation in joint high-level missions, (most recently during the January 2007 developments in Guinea); regular meetings between the focal points of both institutions; working group meetings; activities in the field; cooperation through the UNOWA-ECOWAS-EU Troika framework and the International Contact Groups on the Mano River Union and Guinea-Bissau. In the context of its work on integrated strategies for border areas, the Office contributed to the implementation of the ECOWAS initiative on borders as zones of peace, and helped raise awareness on the following four security challenges in West Africa, and the related international response: irregular migration; security threats and illicit trafficking and piracy; the use and effectiveness of sanctions; and the consequences of rapid urbanization.

As highlighted in the recent report on the midterm review the work of UNOWA (S/2007/294), efforts aimed at promoting an integrated subregional approach to the complex peace and security challenges facing West Africa require long-term sustained interaction, between regional States and institutions and their international partners, including the United Nations system. Much progress has been made but even more remains to be done to build on the momentum and to make the progress irreversible.

In light of the foregoing, I would like to recommend that the mandate of UNOWA, whose functions and activities would be revised as reflected in the document annexed hereto, be extended for a further period of three years, from 1 January 2008 to 31 December 2010, subject to a midterm review to be conducted in 2009.

I should be grateful if you would bring this letter to the attention of the members of the Security Council.

Please accept, Mr. President, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Ban Ki-moon
