

THE DEPUTY SECRETARY-GENERAL

14 August 2014

Excellency,

Thank you for your invitation addressed to the Secretary-General to contribute a written message for your book Champagne on Beer Bottle Pocket.

Regrettably, owing to long-standing guidelines regarding contributions to non-UN publications, the Secretary-General will not be able to meet your request.

Thank you again for your invitation and please accept our best wishes for a successful publication.

Please accept, Excellency, the assurances of my highest consideration.

Dear Mr. Secretary General,

I have the honor to inform that I shall be coming out with my second book, "Champagne on Beer Bottle Pocket," anecdotes of life in the foreign service. (My first book, "Bababa, ba?", didn't make best-seller, but it flattered the author to be included among five finalists on Philippine autobiography in 2006.)

Attached for Your Excellency's perusal is a soft copy of the manuscript. If I may be so brazen, may I request an ultimate favor - if you could oblige a short message for my book? I could not think of an international persona who would give my book in diplomatic life a more vibrant meaning. Moreover, your consent would surely help shorten the shelf life of this tome in bookstores.

Knowing the many events from the four wind which press on your day, I have taken the liberty of attaching a short draft which you may wish to rewrite as only you can best do.

Your signature would give the best imprimatur.

Accept, Excellency and esteemed colleague I had the privilege to meet, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

JOSÉ ABETO ZAIDE
