Please find attached for your approval revised drafts of the SG's report on the Sahel and the UN Integrated Strategy for the Sahel, which is annexed to the report.

The report presents the complex challenges facing the Sahel, emphasizing that the UN strategy will require the sustained engagement of the entire UN system over a period of years. It describes SE Prodi's activities since his appointment in October 2012, as well as his proposal to establish a mechanism that would identify priority regional infrastructure projects to be financed through a dedicated fund.

The strategy identifies specific objectives and indicative actions under three strategic goals, namely: (a) enhancing inclusive and effective governance throughout the region; (b) strengthening the capacity of national and regional security mechanisms to address cross-border threats; and (c) integrating development and humanitarian interventions to build resilience. Specific objectives/actions include the enhancement of regional security analysis and regional capacity to manage borders, support for local government and state capacity to distribute resources more equitably, support to vulnerable households and enhancement food and nutritional security.

Both documents represent a marked improvement over the drafts previously submitted by DPA. As we requested, the revised strategy goes beyond simply describing the problems facing the region and the UN's strategic goals and identifies the actions required to achieve those goals. It also provides a clear indication of which parts of the UN will be responsible for implementing various parts of the strategy.

The report is scheduled for issuance on 14 June. SE Prodi will present the report to the Security Council on 26 June.

Note to the Deputy Secretary-General

DRAFT REPORT OF THE SECRETARY GENERAL ON THE SAHEL

1. I attach the draft report of the Secretary-General to the Security Council on the situation in the Sahel and its annex, the UN Integrated Strategy for the Sahel, which were revised jointly by DPA and UNDP in consultation with all members of the Inter-agency Task Force, including the strong engagement of the UN Office for West Africa (UNOWA), the UN Development Group (UNDG) in Dakar, Senegal and the Regional Humanitarian Coordinator for the Sahel. The report is submitted pursuant to Security Council resolution 2056 (2012), in which the Council requested the Secretary-General to develop a UN integrated strategy for the Sahel region, and resolution 2071 (2012), in which the Security Council welcomed the appointment of the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General (SESG) for the Sahel and endorsed his mandate.
2. The report presents the complex challenges facing the Sahel region, while acknowledging the existence of political will at the regional and international levels to address the underlying causes of vulnerability. It presents activities undertaken by the SESG since his appointment in October 2012 and his planned initiatives aimed at mobilising resources as well as building partnerships with International Financial Institutions (IFIs).
3. The UN Integrated Strategy for the Sahel identifies three strategic objectives, namely (a) enhancing inclusive and effective governance throughout the region; (b) strengthening the capacity of national and regional security mechanisms to address cross-border threats; and (c) integrating development and humanitarian interventions to build resilience. The Strategy is outlined in the body of the report, with specific objectives, indicative actions and lead implementing UN entities presented in an annex. It builds on the UN Inter-agency assessment mission to the Sahel, which took place in December 2011, the conclusions of the African Union (AU) and UN Experts' meeting on the Sahel region held in Addis Ababa from 14 to 15 March 2012 (endorsed by the Ministerial-level AU Peace and Security Council meeting on 20 March 2012 in Bamako), the UN Action Plan for Resilience-building in the Sahel and further consultations among the UN system in the region in March and May 2013.
4. The report emphasises that the implementation of the UN Strategy will require sustained engagement of the UN System as a whole over a period of years and suggests that, in order to maximize its impact, the implementation mechanism should rest on the strong engagement of UNOWA and the UN System in the region.
5. I would be grateful if you could obtain the Secretary-General's approval of the report at his earliest convenience.

Report of the Secretary-General on the situation in the Sahel region

I. Introduction

1. The present report is submitted pursuant to Security Council resolution 2056 (2012), in which the Council requested me to develop and implement, in consultation with regional organizations, a United Nations integrated strategy for the Sahel region encompassing security, governance, development, human rights and humanitarian issues. It is also pursuant to resolution 2071 (2012) in which the Council welcomed the appointment of my Special Envoy for the Sahel to mobilize international efforts, formulate a United Nations integrated strategy on the Sahel and contribute to defining the parameters of a comprehensive solution to the Malian crisis. This report provides an update on the situation in the region, the activities of my Special Envoy for the Sahel, Mr. Romano Prodi, since his appointment in October 2012, and the formulation of the UN integrated strategy for the Sahel (annex 1), taking into account existing regional and international initiatives.

II. Background

2. For much of the last year, the world watched in horror as long-standing political grievances in Mali were overshadowed by appalling acts of violence carried out by insurgents linked to al-Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM). More than half a million people are estimated to have fled and sought refuge either in Malian host communities or in neighbouring countries since the beginning of the Mali crisis in January 2012. Serious human rights violations committed by armed groups and Government soldiers, including summary executions and illegal arrests, recruitment and use of children, sexual violence against women and children, abductions of children and destruction and looting of property, are currently under investigation, while access to basic social services is limited, particularly in the north. In the regions of Timbuktu and Gao, 53 per cent of schools remain closed, while in the Kidal region, schools have not reopened at all.

3. Considerable efforts have been made by France, Chad, ECOWAS, the African Union (AU) and the Security Council, to help the people of Mali stabilise their country. The United Nations Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali (MISNUSMA) will play a key role in consolidating these hard won gains. However, the problems in Mali should not be seen in isolation. The countries of the region recognize that sustainable peace and security will require collective action in addressing the root causes of instability that extend beyond Mali's borders.

4. The "Sahel" stretches from Mauritania to Eritrea, including Mali, Senegal, Burkina Faso, Niger, Chad, Nigeria, and the Sudan, a belt dividing the Sahara Desert and the savannahs to the south. The historic trade routes across Mali, Mauritania, Algeria, Niger, Chad, Libya and Burkina Faso are the most vulnerable to terrorist and criminal networks. The terrain is harsh and in the best of cases, extremely difficult to control. The Algeria-Mali border alone stretches 1,300 kilometers. Moreover, developments in the Sahel-Sahara region affect and are affected by developments in North and West Africa. It will therefore be necessary to remain flexible and inclusive, engaging Governments and the population in Sahelian states, as and when problems affect them.

Governance and security challenges

5. Countries in the Sahel have been dealing with successive political and humanitarian crises for years. Weak governance and its impact on state institutions, including insufficient border management, have dramatically diminished the capacity of the Sahelian states to effectively deliver basic services, promote broad-based political participation and protect human rights. Widespread corruption, coupled with the inability of states to deliver basic services such as effective policing, justice, access to water, affordable health care and education has resulted in a widening gap in state-society relations. At the same time, chronic political instability, evident in recurrent unconstitutional changes of government, violent electoral processes and social conflicts, is a direct result of lack of institutionalized political dialogue, weak parliaments and contested judicial systems.

6. The situation has left the Sahel countries increasingly vulnerable to insecurity resulting from armed conflict, terrorist activities, illicit trafficking and related organized crime. I am particularly concerned by the apparent links between criminal syndicates involved in drug trafficking and related organized crime, as well as non-state armed groups active in the region. I am further alarmed by the activities of terrorist organizations and other militant groups, such as Al Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM), Boko Haram and the Mouvement pour l'Unité du Jihad en Afrique de l'Ouest (MUJAO) as well as other transnational criminal organizations. They have committed acts of terrorism and abuses of human rights, increased the widespread flow of arms, and engaged in human trafficking, drug trafficking and other illicit practices, while at the same time eroding state authority in many of the most vulnerable sections of society in the countries of the Sahel. In doing so they have restricted opportunities for development.

7. The double attack by MUJAO suicide bombers on a barracks and a French run uranium mine in Niger on 23 May killing 35 people and wounding dozens, demonstrates that the Sahel remains vulnerable to the scourge of terrorism. Compounding this challenge, terrorism also has the potential to infiltrate into the wider region as demonstrated by a serious hostage taking incident at a natural gas complex in Algeria on 19 January resulting in numerous deaths. The Government of Libya has repeatedly conveyed to SRSg Mitri its concerns over the threats posed by terrorists and organized criminal groups in the region, as well as to its own internal security. Like other countries in the region, Libya's borders are vast and porous, which makes effective patrolling extremely difficult.

8. In 2012, it was estimated that 18 tons of cocaine amounting to US$ 1.25 billion transited through West Africa, a portion of which allegedly passing through the Sahel. Lack of economic opportunities, limited regional cooperation, weak security and defense sectors as well as porous national borders have also hampered efforts to counter the spread of illicit trafficking, organized crime and terrorism.

Formatted: Bullets and Numbering

9. The issue of cross-border criminality - trafficking in drugs, persons, firearms and cigarettes, as well as terrorism, and money laundering - is often linked to persons or organizations located well beyond the Sahel, and even the African continent. I call on all the concerned Member States to do their part in preventing the use of their territory for criminal activities that exploit the Sahel's weak governance and contribute to the misery of the people of the region. I urge all Member States to do their utmost to tackle drug trafficking, both at its source and at its destination.

10. There is also a lack of government capacity to ensure the protection of basic human rights, both a root cause and a symptom of recurrent crises in the region. Human rights challenges arise from a combination of long-standing weaknesses in the rule of law, a general lack of accountability, social and gender inequities and repeated discriminatory practices against certain vulnerable groups, such as women, including less access than men to land, agricultural assets, inputs and services and to rural employment opportunities, as well as lack of participation in political life. Conflicts and widespread instability have further worsened the human rights situation and are drivers of forced displacement in the Sahel region. The Malian crisis is the latest example of large-scale refugee movements, with nearly 200,000 refugees in neighboring countries, adding pressure on host communities and the environment.

Development and Humanitarian Challenges

11. The Sahel is confronted with acute development and humanitarian challenges. Human development in the region is among the lowest in the world. Over the years, recurring food and nutritional crises caused by climate change, environmental degradation, drought, floods, poorly functioning markets, low agricultural productivity, poverty, and conflict have seriously eroded the ability of households to withstand repeated and increasingly frequent shocks. Despite good rains and better harvests in 2012, at least 11.4 million people in the Sahel region remain food insecure. About 5 million children under the age of five are at risk of acute malnutrition, of which about 1.5 million are at risk of severe acute malnutrition (SAM). The prices of cereal, the staple food in the Sahel, have been increasing since October 2010 and are above the last five year average leading to a significant decrease in the purchasing power of vulnerable households. In addition, the Sahel region faces major and recurrent outbreaks of infectious diseases, such as meningitis, polio and cholera, which present major challenges for weak health systems and can only be addressed through a long-term regional approach aimed at building resilience.

12. Despite its marginal productivity, the Sahel supports nearly 150 million people. At current growth rates, its population is likely to balloon in the next twenty-five years to nearly a quarter of a billion people. Agriculture and pastoralism sustain the major portion of the population in the Sahel. However, traditional livelihoods alone will evidently not be sufficient and a significant transformation will be required across the region. The convergence of chronic under-investment in the agricultural and energy sectors, ineffective social protection systems, inequitable access to basic social services, such as nutrition, education, health, water and sanitation, environmental degradation and rapid population growth, will only result in a further deepening of vulnerability without sustained investment and cooperation in these areas.

13. The regional climate trends observed over the last 40 years in the Sahel show that the impact of changing climatic conditions on the availability of natural resources (land and water), coupled with other magnifying factors, have led to increased competition over natural resources and tensions between communities. While migration and the movement of people and livestock are an integral part of the Sahel's ancestral livelihood strategies, they also occur as a result of multiple climate and market shocks.

Formatted: Bullets and Numbering

14. In particular, many families and communities do not have the capacity to safely and appropriately withstand the damaging effects of climate, poor agro-pastoral campaigns, market fluctuations and other socio-economic shocks they are facing. Conflict further exacerbates existing vulnerabilities. The adoption of negative coping mechanisms, such as selling valuable assets, including agricultural inputs and livestock, incurring debt, migrating to urban areas, pulling children out of school and reducing the quantity and nutritional quality of purchased food leads to a vicious downward spiral of diminished coping capacity, hunger, poverty, and destitution. Poverty and destitution are also among the underlying reasons why children from the region are associated with armed groups, as demonstrated by reports of cross-border recruitment of children from Burkina Faso and Niger by armed groups operating in Mali.

Formatted: Bullets and Numbering

Way forward

15. Despite the daunting multi-faceted challenges facing the Sahel, the unity now demonstrated over Mali gives me confidence that the political will exists both regionally and internationally to address the inter-related root causes of the crisis in the region. We must take advantage of the international consensus, which was evident during the High-Level meeting on the Sahel that I chaired in the margins of General Assembly, general debate on 26 September 2012. Working with the Governments of the region, our objective should be to bring about long-term change through a comprehensive strategy, taking into account existing efforts. This approach needs to be firmly anchored in strong resilience-building efforts as part of a long-term development agenda for the region.

III. Existing national, regional and international initiatives to address Sahel challenges

16. Over the years, the countries of the Sahel region have initiated a series of national reforms aimed at addressing chronic governance, security, development and humanitarian challenges faced, although the scale of these challenges varies from country to country. Flagship programmes have been launched in a number of countries in support of these efforts. For example, in 2012 the Government of Niger launched the "Strategie de Developpement et de Securite dans les zones Sahelo-Sahariennes du Niger". In 2011 it also launched the widely known initiative 3N, 'les Nigériens nourrissent les Nigériens' on food security and nutrition. The Mauritanian government has been at the forefront of efforts to promote enhanced regional border management and, in this regard, hosted an AU Ministerial conference on security cooperation in the Sahelo-Saharan region on 17 March 2013. The Government of Mauritania has also developed a food security strategy, a social protection strategy, a joint programme on nutrition and a Millennium Development Goal (MDG), Acceleration Framework on maternal health. The Government of Burkina Faso is leading ECOWAS mediation efforts in Mali, while on the domestic front it has put in place a plan of action to address long term food insecurity. The Government of Chad has committed to raising USD 400 million from 2012 to 2015 for rural sector transformation to build the foundation for sustained food security and in January 2013, provided a significant and timely contribution to peacekeeping efforts in Mali.

17. At the sub-regional and regional levels, the AU and ECOWAS have developed comprehensive regional frameworks to promote development, good governance, and peace and security and in the region. The New Partnership for Africa's Development (NEPAD) is an AU strategic framework for pan-African socio-economic development, with several programs in the areas of integration and infrastructure, agriculture and food security, as well as climate change and national resource management. Other important frameworks include the 2008 ECOWAS Conflict Prevention Framework, the 2011 Praia Declaration on Elections and Stability in West Africa and the ECOWAS Humanitarian Policy and Plan of Action (2012-17), as well as the 2008-2011 ECOWAS Political Declaration and Regional Action Plan to Combat Illicit Drug Trafficking, Organized Crime and Drug Abuse, which was extended until the end of 2013 during the 42nd Ordinary Session of the Authority of ECOWAS Heads of State and Government in February 2013 in Côte d'Ivoire. During the same Session, the ECOWAS Authority of Heads of State and Government also adopted the Political Declaration on a Common Position against Terrorism, which includes a Counter-Terrorism Strategy and Implementation Plan.

18. In addition to the progress at the regional level in the Sahel, inter-regional cooperation with West Africa and the Maghreb requires greater attention, as many of the challenges faced, including environmental degradation, terrorism and organized crime are inter-regional in nature.

The AU, for its part, is supporting the implementation of the 2013-2018 Plan of Action on Drug Control and Crime Prevention. Through the African Centre for Research and Studies on Terrorism (ACRST) in Algiers, the AU supports member states in implementing its counterterrorism legal framework through regional and international information sharing, cooperation and coordination. In addition, a group of four countries of the Sahel (Algeria, Mali, Mauritania and Niger) have established two mechanisms aimed at addressing transnational threats and enhancing intelligence cooperation - the Common Operational Joint-Chiefs of Staff Committee (CEMOC) located in Tamanrasset, Algeria, and the Unified Fusion and Liaison (UFL) cell. However, those mechanisms need to become fully operational. In addition, the Permanent Inter State Committee for Drought Control in the Sahel (CILSS) has an important role to play in monitoring and analyzing agriculture production and food prices in the region, while the Conference of the Community of Sahelo-Saharan states (CEN-SAD) is ready and needs support to take more action, as demonstrated during its last meeting in March 2013.

for Resilience Initiative (AGIR) was officially launched on 6 December 2012 to address the causes of food insecurity in the region. On 18 March 2013, the EU appointed a Special Representative for the Sahel to lead the EU's contribution to regional and international efforts to foster lasting peace, security and development in the Sahel. The EU also authorized an assistance mission to reinforce efforts to help Libya manage its borders more effectively. A number of other actors have also appointed Special Envoys for the Sahel, including the AU, the Organization for Islamic Cooperation (OIC) and a range of bi-lateral actors.

20. In 2007, the United States Government launched the Trans-Sahara Counterterrorism Partnership (TSCTP) aimed at enhancing the capacity of countries in the Sahel region to tackle terrorism. It also seeks to facilitate cooperation between Sahel countries and Maghreb partners, Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia, on counter-terrorism issues. Within the framework of the Global Counter-Terrorism Forum (GCTF), Algeria and Canada co-chair the Sahel Working Group on Counter-Terrorism Capacity Building. International Financial Institutions (IFIs) have been providing direct financial assistance to the countries and have funded infrastructure development projects across the region. The World Bank is in the process of drafting a development strategy for Mali and the wider Sahel sub-region, while the African Development Bank is working on its Sahel Initiative. In addition, non-governmental organizations have been instrumental in developing policies, supporting advocacy efforts and implementing related initiatives, with a focus on the community level.

Following the influx of returnees to the region from Libya and the resumption of armed conflict in northern Mali, the Security Council convened a series of meetings and issued resolutions 2056 (2012), 2071 (2012) and 2085 (2012) as well as a Presidential Statement on 10 December 2012 in order to effectively address the interrelated challenges facing the Sahel region. In April 2012, I appointed a Regional Humanitarian Coordinator to develop and coordinate humanitarian response in the region. In October 2012, I appointed Romano Prodi as my Special Envoy for the Sahel to lead the United Nations in its efforts to develop and implement an integrated strategy for the region. The United Nations also convened, in collaboration with Member States, a series of meetings on border management, including a meeting on border control cooperation in the Sahel and the Maghreb hosted by the Kingdom of Morocco in March 2013. Meanwhile, the United Support Mission in Libya (UNSMIL) continues to advise the Libyan authorities on matters relating to border security, and the United Nations Office for West Africa (UNOWA), the United Nations Office for Central Africa (UNOCA), as well as other United Nations missions in the wider region, continue to work on these issues.

IV. Rationale for a regional approach and United Nations principles of engagement in the Sahel

23. Based on the foregoing analysis of the underlying causes of instability, and taking into account efforts taken to date to address them, the United Nations Integrated Strategy for the Sahel, outlined in annex I of the present report, aims to support the Governments and people of the region in their efforts to address the causes of instability within a sustainable and long-term perspective. In particular, the United Nations strategy identifies specific objectives and actions under three overarching goals, namely, (a) enhancing inclusive and effective governance throughout the region; (b) strengthening the capacity of national and regional security mechanisms to address cross-border threats; and (c) integrating development and humanitarian interventions to build resilience.

24. The Political will of governments in the region will be required to achieve the objectives and sustain the actions outlined in the United Nations integrated strategy, while ensuring coherence and complementarity with other initiatives. Acting through My Special Envoy for the Sahel and my Special Representatives for West and Central Africa, I will continue to use my good office to foster the necessary political will and mobilize resources, building on the efforts of the United Nations Country Teams.

25. The multiple national security, governance, development and human rights challenges facing the countries of the Sahel have regional ramifications. Inequitable political participation and access to social services have regional dimensions given the cross-border ties of marginalized groups. Terrorist and criminal groups act on a national, regional and international level. The environmental and economic shocks that give rise to humanitarian crises are also regional and international in nature.

26. The challenges facing the Sahel do not respect borders and neither can the solutions. Maintaining the focus on regional cooperation, national capacity building and information sharing will be particularly important. Ensuring proper information flow, coordination and complementarity has proven to be a major challenge for the initiatives taken to date at the regional level. A number of worthy initiatives have suffered from inadequate coordination and have failed to take into account the broader regional dimensions of the problem, partly due to lack of trust, lack of effective regional instruments or lack of information.

27. The governments and peoples of the region must be in the driver's seat. However, the United Nations, acting through my Special Envoy for the Sahel and my Special Representatives for West and Central Africa, will also do its part to improve coordination among the following sets of actors: i) Governments of the region; ii) the international community, including International Financial Institutions (IFIs); iii) the people of the region, by reaching out to them through existing United Nations consultation mechanisms with civil society; and iv) the various parts of the United Nations system. Bringing together these four spheres of coordination, the United Nations system will help integrate efforts to address issues related to governance, security, and resilience, which constitute the three overarching goals of the United Nations integrated strategy for the Sahel.

28. Fostering coordination between the Governments of the region is a top priority. Continuing to build trust and confidence among the countries of the Sahel will be a crosscutting objective of the United Nations integrated strategy, which aims to improve governance structures in the region in a manner that legitimately elected Governments are able to sustain and build upon, with as little dependency as possible on international assistance.

29. Coordination within the broader international community will be important to make optimal use of the limited resources available in the current global economic climate. In this regard, collaboration with regional organizations, in particular ECOWAS, CEN-SAD, the AU, the EU, as well as International Financial Institutions, bilateral donors and Non-Governmental Organizations (NGOs) will be important to generate, sustain and coordinate international engagement in support of the national efforts of Sahelian countries to address the multifaceted challenges they face.

31. The United Nations integrated strategy is designed to foster system-wide unity of purpose and provide a basis for coherent United Nations engagement in the Sahel. It envisages a range of innovative actions related to, inter alia, the enhancement of regional security analysis and regional capacity to manage borders, the strengthening of local government and state capacity to distribute resources more equitably, the provision of support to vulnerable households and the enhancement of food and nutritional security.

The United Nations integrated strategy seeks to enable a multi-sectoral approach to the problems of the Sahel and ensure that the design and implementation of actions bring together the strengths and capacities of the various parts of the United Nations system. It also seeks to build, strengthen and further integrate national capacity-building initiatives into wider development and security efforts, taking into account the policies, priorities and needs of each of the countries in the Sahel. Moreover, the integrated nature of the strategy means that it will be based on joint analysis of cross-cutting issues throughout the Sahel, drawing on inputs and data from all the countries of the region. V. Activities of the Special Envoy visited a number of key international partners, including China, France, Germany, Japan, the Russian Federation, Saudi Arabia, the United States, the European Union, the World Bank, the African Development Bank, the Islamic Development Bank, the Organisation for Islamic Cooperation and United Nations Agencies, Funds and Programmes, and has maintained close contact with them. On 7 December 2012, he convened the first ever coordination meeting with Special Envoys and mediators for the Sahel region. He engaged regularly with the SRSB for West Africa, the United Nations Humanitarian Coordinator for the Sahel, Resident Coordinators and United Nations Country Teams in the region.

34. Since his appointment, my Special Envoy has started to foster the close coordination we need. He has undertaken considerable consultations with key actors working in or on the Sahel region. He has visited the region on several occasions, along with my Special Representative for West Africa, and has met with heads of state, government officials and civil society actors in Burkina Faso, Mali, Mauritania, Niger, as well as the ECOWAS President in Côte d'Ivoire. He has held consultations with the AU, its High Representative for Mali and the Sahel, and the ECOWAS Commission. He also visited Algeria, Egypt, Morocco and Tunisia.

36. During his visits to the region, my Special Envoy has held meetings with civil society representatives and women. In April 2013, together with the EU High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy and Vice-President of the European Commission and the Acting Head of UN Women, my Special Envoy hosted a conference on Women in the Sahel, looking at issues involving women as economic and political drivers of change, as well as their role in conflict mediation. He will continue these consultations with the support of the respective Governments of the region, with the aim of facilitating more inclusive governance processes.

38. The United Nations, European Union, World Bank, African Development Bank, Islamic Development Bank and bilateral donors have all developed strategies to support peace and development in the Sahel. Key partners have encouraged my Special Envoy to support the establishment of a mechanism to enhance coordination among these actors, prioritize actions, and mobilize resources, particularly for key regional infrastructure projects that can kick-start growth quickly and effectively, drive regional integration and create employment, especially for youth. To maximize the impact of our collective efforts in this area, I propose that emphasis be placed on the core Sahelian countries of Burkina Faso, Chad, Mali, Mauritania and Niger.

39. Based on the elements outlined above, My Special Envoy's proposal for a Sahel-owned Development Plan would include two platforms: a coordination platform and an action fund. The coordination platform would focus mainly on regularly updating regional infrastructure priorities, identified through a bottom-up process involving local academics and experts and coordinated by my Special Envoy, in key areas such as agriculture, water management, integrated infrastructure including telecommunications, solar energy and health and education. The platform would enable the main multilateral donors to meet every six months to review their strategies, ensure needs are met and avoid overlap. They would meet with the countries concerned to discuss and agree on priorities for resource mobilization. The inaugural meeting of the coordination

40. The funding platform would act as a "clearing house" for the identified regional infrastructure priorities so as to effectively match needs with available resources. Donors would be encouraged to provide support, either financially or in-kind, for agreed and vetted regional priorities, which would be updated regularly by the above-mentioned coordination platform. In order to facilitate the necessary resource mobilization, my Special Envoy proposes the establishment of a Sahel Action Fund, which could be managed by a pool of International Financial Institutions. The fund would aim to attract bi-lateral and multi-lateral financial support, while also tracking in-kind contributions and encouraging contributors to align their support with the identified regional infrastructure priorities.

41. In keeping with the principle of national ownership, countries in the region will be asked to identify and detail their regional infrastructure priorities. To this end, on 14 June, my Special Envoy convened a follow-up meeting of academics from the Sahel in Bologna, Italy. This meeting constitutes the first step in a process that would allow regional infrastructure priorities to be further developed and refined. Based on the results of the Bologna meeting, my Special Envoy intends to convene the Finance and Planning Ministers of the Sahel region to review and validate the identified regional infrastructure priorities. The threat of terrorism, trafficking and organized crime against extremism and criminality, in line with international human rights norms and standards, focused on providing opportunities for youth and other risk groups such as prisoners, giving a voice to women and fighting corruption.

45. Past initiatives aimed at resolving crises and conflict in the Sahel have focused largely on the national level and shown their limits given the cross-border nature and regional scope of the complex challenges confronting the region. Going forward, the United Nations will need to link national efforts and initiatives to region-wide approaches more effectively. The United Nations integrated strategy is intended to guide United Nations efforts to collectively support Sahel countries address those challenges from a regional perspective, while adhering to the principle of national ownership. The approach is premised on the integration of humanitarian, development and security interventions in order to ensure that life-saving activities meet immediate needs, while building the resilience of people and communities as part of a long-term development agenda for the region.

the United Nations Action Plan for Resilience-building in the Sahel. It is geared towards complementing initiatives and measures taken by the States of the Sahel, West Africa and the Maghreb, as well as regional entities, including the AU, the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), the Arab Maghreb Union (AMU), and the Community of Sahelo-Saharan States (CENSAD). 47. In implementing the integrated strategy for the Sahel, the United Nations will seek to leverage its comparative advantage based on its long-standing presence in the region and its experience in addressing some of the most acute problems facing the populations concerned. The Organization will draw upon its good offices function to coordinate, facilitate and convene relevant actors to help tackle some of the critical issues as well as support resource mobilization and advocacy efforts. However, the UN alone cannot successfully address the tremendous challenges facing the Sahel, and the countries of the region have to maintain their leadership and ownership of the process. The effectiveness of the strategy must be enhanced through partnerships with other interested major actors in the region, such as the AU and ECOWAS, International Financial Institutions, and multilateral and bilateral partners, whose technical and financial assistance will be key to the success of this coordinated approach.

48. Effective regional cooperation among Sahelian countries requires continued engagement. I will continue to use my good offices, including though my Special Envoy for the Sahel and my Special Representatives for West and Central Africa, to help build mutual trust among states in the Sahel.

49. Nowhere is the development-security nexus more evident than in the Sahel. Only through strong, common preventative actions geared primarily towards development can we avoid the Sahel turning into an area dominated by criminal and terrorist groups that undermine our collective security. Regional security, regional development cooperation and greater regional integration are essential and should go hand-in-hand with one another. We must therefore focus on strengthening regional mechanisms across all sectors and promote integrated and comprehensive national strategies for dealing with terrorism and transnational organized crime that complement these mechanisms. For this reason, the United Nations' strategy will be implemented in close cooperation with the AU, ECOWAS, ECCAS, CEN-SAD, CILSS, the Arab-Maghreb Union and other relevant sub-regional actors.

50. Building upon national programs already in place in a number of countries, actions are urgently needed to support inclusive resilience building. In the short-term, humanitarian action will continue to provide life-saving assistance and address most acute needs. In the medium-term, and through a mixture of humanitarian and development assistance, disaster risk reduction and development interventions will aim to rebuild assets, support livelihoods, scale up social protection, and provide access to basic services, without any form of discrimination. Annex I: UN INTEGRATED STRATEGY FOR THE SAHEL

The UN integrated strategy is built around three broad areas of support formulated as strategic goals and organized according to key themes. The strategic goals are intended to support and strengthen ongoing initiatives and to address previously-identified gaps. A series of specific objectives and indicative actions are proposed to achieve these goals. The three areas of support are complementary and form an integrated response to the Sahel crisis. In particular, the approach is premised on the integration of humanitarian and development interventions to ensure that life-saving activities meet immediate needs while building the resilience of people and communities as part of a long-term development agenda.

STRATEGIC GOAL ONE: INCLUSIVE AND EFFECTIVE GOVERNANCE THROUGHOUT THE REGION IS ENHANCED

Effective governance rests on State legitimacy based on political inclusion, rule of law as well as State capacity and accountability to deliver basic services. The United Nations' good offices are focused in part on helping countries of the region attain state legitimacy when and where required, and the programmatic activities of the system are geared towards building the needed capacity and accountability mechanisms. Good governance including in the security sector, is an essential element of United Nations programming, as reflected in the UNDAFs and PRSPs or national development frameworks. The goal of effective and inclusive governance can be broken down into the following objectives and indicative actions:

STRATEGIC GOAL TWO: NATIONAL AND REGIONAL SECURITY MECHANISMS ARE CAPABLE OF ADDRESSING CROSS-BORDER THREATS

Deleted: ¶

Formatted: Justified

National, sub-regional and regional security mechanisms, grounded in respect for human rights and the rule of law, need to be strengthened and made fully operational. The countries of the region, in response to the crisis in Mali, have taken initial steps towards greater cooperation, including in information sharing. The AU, United Nations, ECOWAS and CEN-SAD have played important roles in this area. It is important to build upon these efforts, both to foster trust among the countries whose cooperation is vital, and to strengthen their capacities to address cross-border threats. United Nations entities such as UNOWA, UNODC, CTITF, DPKO, CTED, the 1267 Monitoring Team and OHCHR undertake important initiatives in these areas. It is crucial for the United Nations family to align its various initiatives when it comes to addressing the current Sahel crisis in a comprehensive and integrated manner, ensuring that these are grounded in respect for human rights and the rule of law, including illicit trafficking, transnational organised crime and terrorism, which do not always have the visibility they deserve in light of the critical situation in these areas in the region. Objective 2.1: Enhance United Nations regional security analysis and monitoring of cross-border threats in the Sahel.

Deleted: N

Indicative actions:

- (i) Building upon existing mapping of security measures and mechanisms, including the United Nations Interagency Assessment report on the Sahel (S/2012/42) as well as detailed mapping exercises that have already been undertaken by CTITF, the United Nations Counter-Terrorism Centre (UNCCT) and CTED, the United Nations system will collaboratively identify gaps in existing frameworks aimed at combating transnational organized crime and terrorism. The United Nations system will step up its efforts to raise national stakeholders' awareness of the available strategies and technologies, with a view to making optimum use of resources. (CTITF, UNODC, UNOWA)
- (ii) In fulfillment of its preventive diplomacy mandate, UNOWA will work with the rest of the United Nations system to strengthen its analytical capacity and improve information sharing across the United Nations system in the sub-region. As part of this effort, a MINUSMA Liaison Officer, based in UNOWA, will collaborate with DSS analysts in the region, the 1267 Monitoring Team and other relevant United Nations actors, such as the Peace and Development Advisors (PDA), in support of UNOWA's analytical capacity. Objective 2.2: Enhance national capacities, including through improved coordination between relevant national institutions, to tackle terrorism and transnational organized crime in line with international human rights standards.

Indicative actions:

- (i) An important step towards more effective border management in the region is to ensure a more coordinated and coherent approach at the national level. Security sector agencies will need to integrate and coordinate their border management activities. The United Nations counter terrorism entities (CTITF, CTED), UNOWA and UNODC will lead United Nations efforts to help countries in the region establish coordinating mechanisms to counter terrorism and fight organized crime, so that police, border guard, the army, customs and national security advisors work together in a coherent manner and in compliance with human rights and the rule of law. A mechanism for sharing information among coordinating mechanisms in neighboring countries will also be established. It is expected that a first project in the Sahel area will be piloted in Burkina Faso this year by CTITF and CTED, in collaboration with relevant United Nations entities under the CTITF Integrated Assistance for Countering Terrorism (I-ACT) initiative. Once other projects in the region are established, support will be given to the development of a regional network that would contribute to building an effective regional early warning mechanism. (CTITF, CTED, UNOWA, UNODC)
- (ii) Use the United Nations Counter Terrorism Implementation Task Force as a coordination platform for United Nations counter terrorism entities to propose country-focused solutions for implementation of the United Nations Global counter terrorism strategy in the Sahel, including its pillar IV on respect for human rights for all and the rule of law, as the basis for the fight against terrorism. (CTITF, UNOWA)
- (iii) Strengthen efforts to facilitate the delivery of technical counter-terrorism capacity-building assistance for police, prosecutors and the judiciary in the Sahel countries, with full respect for human rights. (CTITF, CTED, UNDP, DPKO)
- (iv) Support the upgrading of law enforcement and judicial training institutions curricula and improve skills and techniques pertaining to in-depth investigations in line with international human rights law, and rule of law standards. This includes improving cooperation between law enforcement and justice institutions. Special emphasis would be placed on drugs and arms trafficking, trafficking in human beings, terrorist activities and financial investigations. (UNODC)
- (v) Further improve the effectiveness of the law enforcement and judicial response to money-laundering and financial crime. This would require all authorities concerned to systematically pursue an asset-oriented approach when investigating or prosecuting cases related to illicit trafficking or terrorism, to actively engage with their country's financial intelligence unit,

STRATEGIC GOAL THREE: HUMANITARIAN AND DEVELOPMENT PLANS AND INTERVENTIONS ARE INTEGRATED TO BUILD LONG-TERM RESILIENCE

Multi-sectoral approaches are required to build the resilience of the Sahelian people by bridging humanitarian and development programming in order to address the underlying causes and consequences of food and nutrition insecurity and other vulnerabilities, as well as to promote long-term development. Coherent, mutually reinforcing and harmonized planning and implementation of humanitarian and development activities will help deliver a successful resilience package to the most vulnerable communities. Food and nutritional security will remain at the centre of the resilience strategy. The following objectives and indicative actions are central to this effort:
